Washington, Oct. 10 (AP) — The ate voted over-whelmingly to- against side-tracking the ad- nistration's proposal to repeal arms embargo.

Administration leaders replied st voting on these restrictions, d the remainder of the bill, could n at once if Tobey would per- de the foes of repeal to end debate and agree to immediate ion. Dividing the bill would lead y to more delay, they argued.

I feel that this will now satisfy country that further debate accomplish nothing," he told porters.

Pittman recalled that he had dicted a few days ago that the eal proposal would muster be- een sixty-four and sixty-eight of Senate's ninety-six votes.

Roosevelt Wants To Increase Army To 600,000 Men

Says Nation's Three Branches of Service Now Total 562,000

By E. E. BOMAR

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that the administration aims at building up the army to approximately 600,000 men, including regular troops, the national guard and reserve officers.

He hastened to note at his press conference, however, that the nation's armed forces already approach this figure. The three forces together will number 562,000 when the regulars and guardsmen attain the augmented strength the President ordered a month ago in proclaiming a national emergency.

Further Expansion Planned

The war department already had disclosed plans for further expansion by stating that four new divisions would be formed "when and if" a 53,000-man increase in the regular army's peace time limit of 280,000 is authorized.

Mr. Roosevelt's comment was evoked by an address in which Louis Johnson, assistant secretary of war, said that the fate of Poland showed that the United States needed at least 600,000 trained men ready for quick mobilization. Asked about the figure, Mr. Roosevelt said it was not far from administration aims.

Meanwhile, the war department announced orders for 65,000 quick-firing semi-automatic rifles and for an undisclosed number of war-plane motors described as among the most powerful in the world.

Officials also disclosed that national guardsmen would drill twice a week instead of once weekly, as at present. The drills will be supplemented by week-end training in the field.

Lewis Asks Peace For America, but Not for A.F.O.L.

Urges Congress To Adopt Roosevelt's Neutrality Program

San Francisco, Oct. 10 (AP)—John L. Lewis demanded peace for America in opening the second CIO convention today but offered no peace to the AFL.

He urged Congress to adopt President Roosevelt's neutrality program and expressed the hope "President Roosevelt will make available his own great influence in behalf of peace, when conditions warrant and justify his intervention."

The question of a united labor movement was laid before Lewis by Governor Culbert L. Olson of California who told the 400 delegates "unity between the CIO and AFL" was "desirable alike from the standpoint of labor and national well-being."

Lewis replied, "the Congress of Industrial Organizations had to be organized before Governor Olson could come here to make a speech. x x x The people of the United States were never made conscious of the labor problem before the Congress of Industrial Organizations came into being."

Olson Predicts Unity

Governor Olson had forecast AFL-CIO unity. But Lewis's remarks indicated he expected to lead the CIO as a separate entity for at least another five years.

"Five years ago my voice was a feeble voice in this hall" where he was a delegate to an AFL national convention, the CIO leader said. "But today I come back to San Francisco and behind me is an army of four million men and women—a greater numerical force than ever followed any conquerer in the pages of history."

This "army of peace" he said represented 20,000,000 Americans.

"When I come back five years from now," he continued, "as come back I will, I will come into San Francisco with at least 10,000,000 dues paying members."

Convention Approves Stand

The convention thundered its approval as it had applauded his repeated requests to "organize the unorganized" and his demands for peace.

"The members of the Congress of Industrial Organization are Americans in principle, in thought and in action," Lewis said. "We will at all times give support to our instrumentalities of government and the political leadership of our country

Richard Gallogly Surrenders, Asks For Texas Mercy

By FELIX R. McKNIGHT

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 10 (AP)—Slight Richard Gallogly, fugitive Georgia life-termer, strode into the sheriff's office today, surrendered and calmly pleaded for the "Texas mercy" he sought in a five-day flight across four Southern states.

The twenty-nine-year-old member of a prominent Georgia family, prison-bound for ten years in one of the state's most sensational criminal cases, told Sheriff Smoot Schmid he had traveled night and day since escaping from two prison guards Friday night.

"The people out here in the southwest are real men—they'll understand my case," he said.

Will Fight Extradition

The former Oglethorpe University student, who, at 19, pleaded guilty in the slaying of a drug store clerk and three times has been refused a parole from his life term, added he would fight extradition.

"That was my purpose coming here," he said. "I can't get justice in Georgia. If your governor refuses to grant extradition, I can live an honest, forthright life. I just want a chance."

Gallogly's blonde wife, whom he married in May while in an Atlanta hospital, accompanied him to Dallas, but he repeatedly told officers he did not know where she could be found. He met her in prison some six years ago when, as a state teachers college student, she visited state prison for piano recitals.

The nattily dressed Gallogly, calm in his lengthy description of his escape, violently denied that the two guards from whom he fled, Joe Freeman and Roy A. Matthews, knew of his escape plans. Matthews had been named in a warrant

German Loudspeakers on Western Front Blare at the French Army

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The war of words in Europe has reached even the Western battle front, with German propaganda loud-speakers blaring at French poilus between trench mortar salvos and the shuddering cough of machine guns. This emphasizes that the war of large-scale action has yet to begin.

The war lords of 1939, Premier Daladier, Chancellor Hitler and British cabinet spokesmen, were busy yesterday on the home fronts with words designed to bolster public morale. And the most active non-belligerent, the big unknown quantity in the European equasion, Soviet Russia, was busy, too, with words and menacing gestures, from the troubled Baltic to the almost land-locked Baltic Sea.

Russia's Role a Mystery

Russia's role in the grim game remains one of the prime enigmas of the war. None knows certainly on which side she is playing, if on any but her own.

Russian force politics, borrowed from the Hitler manual, has made Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania actual or potential Russian outposts in the upper Baltic; made Finland an armed camp, seething with uncertainty; sent chills of fear throughout all Scandinavia. It has

No Overtures for Peace Received by Roosevelt, He Says at Conference

Does Not Think Much of Press Story that Hitler Would Welcome Proposals for an Armistice

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt told reporters today that no offers or overtures for peace in Europe had been received by the government.

This was one of the questions posed at his press conference:

"Have any offers or overtures of peace been received?"

The president replied with a firm no.

For the most part Mr. Roosevelt paried questions about prospects of an armistice in the European conflict, although reporters attempted to sound him out in view of intimations from Germany that Hitler would accept mediation if the president so proposed.

In that connection, the president said he had told his luncheon guest, Lord Beaverbrook, British publisher, a story which he described as an interesting parable with respect to current peace talk.

He said he had related this story:

Crop Prospects Reduced by Dry And Hot Weather

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—One of the driest and hottest Septembers in many years cut American crop prospects one percent, caused severe damage to pastures in the midwest and reduced winter wheat prospects for next year, the agriculture department reported today.

However, the aggregate production of all crops was estimated at between one and two percent above the overage for the ten years preceding the 1933 drought. High yields per acre offset the effects of the late summer drought and a seven percent reduction from the ten-year average in the number of acres planted.

Consequently, with warehouses and elevators holding large surpluses of most crops from previous years, the September losses would not be felt except in localities where the damage occurred, the department said.

The board estimated corn production at 2,532,417,000 bushels compared with last year's crop of 2,542,238,000 bushels and a ten-year average of 2,309,674,000 bushels. It also estimated the supply of old corn on farms October 1 at 546,652,000 bushels, by far the largest on record.

The board estimated the wheat crop at 739,445,000 bushels compared with 930,801,000 last year and a ten-year acreage of 752,952,000. Spring wheat production was placed at 188,735,000 bushels of which 33,144,000 was durum.

The indicated production of fruit was described as sufficient to provide more than the usual per capital supply. Large crops of peaches, pears, apricots, cherries and commercial apples account for most of this increase.

Britain Plans Gigantic Plane Program To Center in Canada

By EDWIN STOUT

London, Ont. 10 (AP)—An empire-wide air force building program centering in Canada was announced by the government today as Britain noted Adolf Hitler's renewed challenge to choose war or peace and warily watched Russia's moves in the Baltic.

While Hitler was declaring in Berlin that "no power on earth will again bring Germany to its knees," Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood told the House of Commons that the empire was marshaling planes and fliers in a mighty plan to "beat the enemy and to ensure once and for all that aggression and tryanny are ended."

A direct answer by the government to Hitler's peace proposals made last Friday was postponed from Wednesday to Thursday to give the dominions full voice in added consultations. Then Prime Minister Chamberlain will state Britain's position in his weekly war report to parliament.

Hitler Still Asks Peace

Hitler renewed his reference to German's "readiness for peace" in his speech in the Sportspalast today.

The massing of Soviet troops on the Finnish frontier and the concentratio nof Russian naval strength at Kronstadt naval base near Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland drew only guarded comment from government sources and the press.

Britons watched for signs of whether Russian gains in the Baltic area helped or hindered Hitler and many believed the German Fuehrer's aim of expansion in eastern Europe which he expressed in "Mein Kampf" seemed definitely thwarted.

Atlee Challenges Fuehrer

Clement R. Atlee, leader of the labor opposition, called upon Hitler to "show by deeds" if he wants peace in Western Europe.

"The people of this country are ready to take any opportunity of ending the present war provided we can get real and lasting peace without sacrificing the cause for which we entered it," Atlee said in a nationwide broadcast.

"If he wants peace, he must show it by deeds," Atlee said.

Sir Kingsley disclosed that a British mission already is on its way to Canada to complete an empire air reservoir setup with missions from Australia, New Zealand and the Canadian government.

Under the plan most of the advanced air training will be in Canada and all dominions would join in plane production.

The air minister declared Britain now was producing fighters superior to the German Messerschmidts and said production plans envisaged doubling the "considerable" figure already reached.

Hopes for Peace Fade When French Spokesman Refuses To Negotiate

Premier Declares France Will Not Lay Down Arms until Threats of Aggression Are Removed; Hitler Says Germany Will "Fight It Through" If Allies Rebuff His Peace Offers

By The Associated Press

Premier Daladier of France last (Tuesday) night rejected Fuehrer Hitler's peace overtures, declaring in a radio broadcast that the "German Peace" would not prevent further aggression.

A few hours earlier Hitler, opening a winter relief campaign, had declared that if France and Britain rebuffed German peace efforts Germany would "take up the battle and fight it through."

And as the two statesmen aired their views in a continuation of the "war of words," the German army sent "suicide squads" of hand grenade throwers and steadily increasing numbers of men into spreading attacks against French advance lines along a 35-mile sector of the Western front.

The French reported it was becoming more difficult each day to repulse the German patrol action.

As the Western nations were thus engaged, Russia pushed ahead with her drive to dominate the Baltic, massing hundreds of thousands of Soviet troops and naval forces along the frontiers facing the Baltic states on the eve of the arrival in Moscow today of a delegation from Finland.

Finland Ready to Fight

Finland, anxious lest Russia demand military and economic concessions such as were gained in recent negotiations with Latvia and Estonia, apparently was ready to resist.

Authorities called upon women and children of Helsinki, the capital, to leave for the less populous regions to the north, and thousands complied. Air defense measures were rehearsed.

One of the reports causing concern in Finland was that Russia had concentrated "a whole armada of battleships" at Kronstadt, Soviet naval base near Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland.

While Finland made ready to negotiate or resist, Lithuania decided to accept Moscow terms. What the terms were remained obscure, but it was reported the Lithuanians would get back their disputed capital, Vilna, from Russian-occupied Poland.

Allies To Continue To Fight

Premier Daladier declared in his address that France and Britain would "continue to fight" until they forced Germany to give definite guarantees of security for a "lasting peace in Europe." He said that if France were to accept Hitler's peace terms now, based on his conquest of Poland, she would in a few months have to face "abrupt aggression."

First reaction in Berlin to this speech was not altogether unfavorable. While a difference in viewpoints was acknowledged, some political quarters emphasized that Daladier's emphasis on security for France was in no way opposed to anything Hitler said in putting his peace program before the Reichstag last Friday.

President Roosevelt told Washington reporters that no offers or overtures for peace in Europe had been received by the United States government. For the most part he parried questions about prospects of an armistice in the conflict.

Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood disclosed that Britain had launched an empire-wide air force building program centering in Canada to provide planes and fliers to "beat the enemy and to ensure once and for all that aggression and tyranny are ended."

False rumors of an armistice suddenly swept through Berlin during the day, resulting in joyous celebrations which were halted abruptly by a solemn official announcement that the rumors came from London's "ministry of lies."

Daladier in Fiery Speech Gives Signal for European War To Go On

By TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Oct. 10 (AP)—Premier Daladier tonight gave the signal for the European war to go on, with a refusal of Adolf Hitler's peace formula based on Russian-German partition of Poland.

In a nation-wide broadcast the French premier made the first formal reply to the Friday Reichstag speech of Hitler by spurning the "German peace" as one which would not prevent preparations for new conquests.

As the premier spoke the French general staff announced that French troops on the Western front were repulsing surprise German attacks by "quite large numbers of men" along a 35-mile stretch from the Moselle river, on the extreme northern flank, to Saarbruecken center key to the Nazi advanced lines.

The general staff's night communique said that German patrol activity throughout the entire sector was "very great."

Speaking in measured tones at his desk in the war ministry, Daladier did not repeat previous French and British declarations that Hitlerism must be destroyed but left no doubt that unsupported promises such as he said Hitler had given in the past would be unacceptable as a basis for peace negotiations.

He characterized the peace offered by Hitler as one "which

Nation Watching Conversations with Soviet Officials

Moscow, Oct. 10 (AP) — Soviet Russia tonight concluded a series of three mutual assistance pacts with the Baltic states by signing a treaty with Lithuania which gave the Red Army the right to establish several garrisons at unspecified places within the country to guard its frontiers.

Steady military and naval activity by the Soviet forces, indicated the Kremlin's program in the North Baltic was not complete and that Finland would be next to hear Russian suggestions for her "protection"—and for the consolidating of Soviet strength in the North Baltic.

Crop Prospects Reduced by Dry And Hot Weather

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—One of the driest and hottest Septembers in many years cut American crop prospects one percent, caused severe damage to pastures in the midwest and reduced winter wheat prospects for next year, the agriculture department reported today.

However, the aggregate production of all crops was estimated at between one and two percent above the overage for the ten years preceding the 1933 drought. High yields per acre offset the effects of the late summer drought and a seven percent reduction from the ten-year average in the number of acres planted.

Consequently, with warehouses and elevators holding large surpluses of most crops from previous years, the September losses would not be felt except in localities where the damage occurred, the department said.

The board estimated corn production at 2,532,417,000 bushels compared with last year's crop of 2,542,238,000 bushels and a ten-year average of 2,309,674,000 bushels. It also estimated the supply of old corn on farms October 1 at 546,652,000 bushels, by far the largest on record.

The board estimated the wheat crop at 739,445,000 bushels compared with 930,801,000 last year and a ten-year acreage of 752,952,000. Spring wheat production was placed at 188,735,000 bushels of which 33,144,000 was durum.

The indicated production of fruit was described as sufficient to provide more than the usual per capital supply. Large crops of peaches, pears, apricots, cherries and commercial apples account for most of this increase.

Hopes for Peace Fade When French Spokesman Refuses To Negotiate

Premier Declares France Will Not Lay Down Arms until Threats of Aggression Are Removed; Hitler Says Germany Will "Fight It Through" If Allies Rebuff His Peace Offers

By The Associated Press

Premier Daladier of France last (Tuesday) night rejected Fuehrer Hitler's peace overtures, declaring in a radio broadcast that the "German Peace" would not prevent further aggression.

A few hours earlier Hitler, opening a winter relief campaign, had declared that if France and Britain rebuffed German peace efforts Germany would "take up the battle and fight it through."

And as the two statesmen aired their views in a continuation of the "war of words," the German army sent "suicide squads" of hand grenade throwers and steadily increasing numbers of men into spreading attacks against French advance lines along a 35-mile sector of the Western front.

The French reported it was becoming more difficult each day to repulse the German patrol action.

As the Western nations were thus engaged, Russia pushed ahead with her drive to dominate the Baltic, massing hundreds of thousands of Soviet troops and naval forces along the frontiers facing the Baltic states on the eve of the arrival in Moscow today of a delegation from Finland.

Finland Ready to Fight

Finland, anxious lest Russia demand military and economic concessions such as were gained in recent negotiations with Latvia and Estonia, apparently was ready to resist.

Authorities called upon women and children of Helsinki, the capital, to leave for the less populous regions to the north, and thousands complied. Air defense measures were rehearsed.

One of the reports causing concern in Finland was that Russia had concentrated "a whole armada of battleships" at Kronstadt, Soviet naval base near Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland.

While Finland made ready to negotiate or resist, Lithuania decided to accept Moscow terms. What the terms were remained obscure, but it was reported the Lithuanians would get back their disputed capital, Vilna, from Russian-occupied Poland.

Allies To Continue To Fight

Premier Daladier declared in his address that France and Britain would "continue to fight" until they forced Germany to give definite guarantees of security for a "lasting peace in Europe." He said that if France were to accept Hitler's peace terms now, based on his conquest of Poland, she would in a few months have to face "abrupt aggression."

First reaction in Berlin to this speech was not altogether unfavorable. While a difference in viewpoints was acknowledged, some political quarters emphasized that Daladier's emphasis on security for France was in no way opposed to anything Hitler said in putting his peace program before the Reichstag last Friday.

President Roosevelt told Washington reporters that no offers or overtures for peace in Europe had been received by the United States government. For the most part he parried questions about prospects of an armistice in the conflict.

Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood disclosed that Britain had launched an empire-wide air force building program centering in Canada to provide planes and fliers to "beat the enemy and to ensure once and for all that aggression and tyranny are ended."

False rumors of an armistice suddenly swept through Berlin during the day, resulting in joyous celebrations which were halted abruptly by a solemn official announcement that the rumors came from London's "ministry of lies."

Daladier in Fiery Speech Gives Signal for European War To Go On

By TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Oct. 10 (AP)—Premier Daladier tonight gave the signal for the European war to go on, with a refusal of Adolf Hitler's peace formula based on Russian-German partition of Poland.

In a nation-wide broadcast the French premier made the first formal reply to the Friday Reichstag speech of Hitler by spurning the "German peace" as one which would not prevent preparations for new conquests.

As the premier spoke the French general staff announced that French troops on the Western front were repulsing surprise German attacks by "quite large numbers of men" along a 35-mile stretch from the Moselle river, on the extreme northern flank, to Saarbruecken center key to the Nazi advanced lines.

The general staff's night communique said that German patrol activity throughout the entire sector was "very great."

In a measured tones at his desk in the war ministry, Daladier did not repeat previous French and British declarations that Hitlerism must be destroyed but left no doubt that unsupported promises such as he said Hitler had given in the past would be unacceptable as a basis for peace negotiations.

He characterized the peace offered by Hitler as one "which

German Loudspeakers on Western Front Blare at the French Army

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The war of words in Europe has reached even the Western battle front, with German propaganda loud-speakers blaring at French poilus between trench mortar salvos and the shuddering cough of machine guns. This emphasizes that the war of large-scale action is yet to begin.

The war lords of 1939, Premier Daladier, Chancellor Hitler and British cabinet spokesmen, were busy yesterday on the home fronts with words designed to bolster public morale. And the most active non-belligerent, the big unknown quantity in the European equasion, Soviet Russia, was busy, too, with words and menacing gestures, from the troubled Baltic to the almost land-locked Baltic Sea.

Russia's Role a Mystery

Russia's role in the grim game remains one of the prime enigmas of the war. None knows certainly on which side she is playing, if on any but her own.

Russian force politics, borrowed from the Hitler manual, has made Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania actual or potential Russian outposts in the upper Baltic; made Finland an armed camp, seething with uncertainty; sent chills of fear throughout all Scandinavia. It has

O'Conor's Safety Committee Given Real Cooperation

State-Wide Drive Producing Encouraging Results at Start

Annapolis, October 10—Although openly delighted with the complete state-wide coperation manifested from beginning to end of October Safety week, Governor O'Conor and the members of his Maryland Traffic Safety Committee, in the words of a famous American patriot, "Have just begun to fight". October week is over, and the people of the state have been made definitely safety conscious, but every member of the committee realizes that there can be no let-down, even for a day, in the fight against traffic dangers on Maryland's streets and highways.

Among a number of important developments of October Safety week, one that will be bound to win instant favor with every motorist, bus and truck driver, is the plan announced by Major Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the State Roads Commission, to place below every "Arrow Curve Sign' numerals indicating the safe speed at which the curve can be negotiated.

Some Roads Not Safe at Fifty

It is Major Whitman's contention that, while the law permits a speed of fifty miles per hour on country roads, there are many portions of these roads, especially on curves, where it is not safe to travel at fifty miles per hour, and the new signs are intended to serve as a continuing warning of these danger spots. Of luminous construction they can be seen at night as well as day.

General Chairman Thomas P. Abbott, of Baltimore, is issuing a call for a meeting of the executive committee this week-end, to check the final results achieved during October Week, and to lay plans for an even more intensified campaign during the first seven days of November. Because of the lack of notice, many of the civic and fraternal organizations throughout the state did not have an opportunity to arrange Safety programs during the week just passed.

Not Fully Organized

Some of the county committees, likewise, were not fully organized in time to achieve the full results possible in their respective territories, but it is expected that they will be well prepared for November Safety week, with the result that, for this period, the state should see by far the most concerted movement in the interests of safety that ever has been attempted in Maryland.

In the meantime, permanent committees are being lined up by the executive committee, to perform the all-important work of adult and school safety education, satistical information, enforcement, engineering and legislation, without all of which, experience has shown, it is impossible to do a successful safety job.

Thousands Attend Frederick Fair

Frederick, Md., Oct. 10 (AP)—With the temperature approaching the gay nineties, thousands turned out today for the opening of the seventy-ninth annual Frederick fair.

Fair officials said the last inch of exhibit space was gone and the new horse barn, completed this spring, was filled to overflowing with some animals put in stalls usually alloted to horses entered in the harness races.

As the opening-day crowd stormed through the gates into the concession area, Lee Ranneberger, superintendent of concessions, issued a last-minute warning that "there would be absolutely no gambling" and that anyone violating the rule would be put off the grounds.

Races were on the program this afternoon, and also will be run tomorrow and Thursday. Motorcycle races will be run Friday, the fair's closing day.

Apple Production Forecast Lower

Washington, Oct. 10. (AP)—A 1939 commercial apple production of 100,998,000 bushels was forecast today by the corp reporting board on the basis of orchard conditions on October 1.

The estimate, two per cent below the forecast of September 1, was five per cent above the ten year average production of 96,469,000 bushels but thirteen per cent below the relatively large crop of 1937.

The board said dry, hot weather in many states, some worm damage, poor sizes in some sections and heavy cullage forced it to reduce its September estimate.

It said, however, that the quality of the early harvested commercial pack was generally considered to be good. Late varieties, it added, were sizing well. In both varieties, however, there had been considerable loss. Works took their toll and were expected to add to the damage of fruit still on the trees in the Pacific northwest. Wind robbed producers of many of their apples in the mid-western areas.

would only consecrate conquests by deceit or violence and would not prevent preparation for new ones."

"What, in fact, does the latest speech before the Reichstag amount to?" he demanded.

Belittles Hitler Speech

"This: I destroyed Poland, I am satisfied; let's stop the combat; let's hold a conference to consecrate my conquests and organize peace."

The premier suggested that if France accepted Hitler's present proposals and demobilized under vain promises" in a few months time she would have to face "abrupt aggression." France and Britain, he said, were "obliged to fight because Germany wanted to impose on them her domination over Europe."

"We have taken up arms against aggression. We lay them down only when we have certain guarantees of security—of security which may not be into doubt every six months."

Daladied did not go beyond demanding "reciprocal guarantees excluding any surprise and erecting a barrier against any attempt at domination."

Chamberlain Speaks Next

Many diplomatic observers believed that he paved the way for a further exposition of the Allies' position by Prime Minister Chamberlain before the House of Commons Thursday.

He made it plain that he considered Hitler's past promises worthless.

The premier also left the impression that any promises written into a future peace treaty would have to be based on physical control which would guarantee that the Germans would not seek to continue the path of conquest which crossed Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

These three countries, he asserted were only steps "on the path which would have brought France and Europe to the Harshest of slaveries."

Must Correct Abuses

If peace really is desired, he said, "it will be necessary first to calm the revolted consciences, correct abuses of force and conciliate honestly the rights and interests of all peoples."

"They say that the fate of Poland concerns only two powers. We reply that it interests also and first of all the Poles."

Turning to the process of the war, Daladier declared:

"For a month our soldiers have advanced on enemy territory. In the air our aviators have multiplied the proofs of their courage.

"On the sea our sailors have assured free communications of France with her empire, pursued enemy submarines, captured hundreds of thousands of tons of raw material destined for Germany."

The premier referred derisively to Germany's radio propaganda campaign to try to separate Britain and France.

These broadcasts, he said, were drowned out by the "uninterrupted rumbling of convoys which were taking soldiers and cannon of the British army toward our frontiers."

Hitler Says Allies Will Be To Blame If European War Continues

By EDWIN SHANKE

Berlin, Oct. 10 (AP)—Adolf Hitler declared today that "Germany is determined to take up the battle and fight it through" if the Western Allies rebuff "our readiness for peace."

If the war goes on the Western Allies will be to blame, he said in a speech opening the Nazi winter relief campaign, but they never will "see any sort of German capitulation."

"We do not know what the future will bring," he said, "but we are clear about one thing—no power on earth will again bring Germany to its knees. They will not defeat us militarily, nor destroy us economically, nor break our spirit. Under no circumstances will they live to see any sort of German capitulation."

The decision regarding peace or continuance of the war, he said, "no longer lies with us, but with the other side."

"With us exists only the grim determination to abide by the decision, whatever it may be, and to fight through to the last end," he declared.

Speaks in Angry Tones

His 21-minute speech, delivered in angry tones at the huge Sportspalast, came at the end of a day during which false rumors of an armistice sent Berliners into manifestations of joy. Official denial brought a halt to impromptu celebrations.

Many described the rumor as a "1918 false armistice in miniature." Government offices and newspaper bureaus were flooded with calls from persons seeking confirmation. Germans threw their arms around one another and wept for joy. In one plant 200 workers laid down their tools "to celebrate."

Then came the solemn radio announcement that the rumors were the products of the London "ministry of lies" and finally Der Fuehrer's defiant address in the favorite rally hall of the Nazi party, the Sportspalast, which was packed with 25,000 winter relief workers.

Asserting as he did in his Reichstag speech last Friday that Germany has no war aims against England and France, Hitler said:

"I have expressed our readiness for peace. In case this readiness on our part is declined, then Germany is determined to take up the battle and fight it through.

"Neither fright of the moment nor a proclamation of the length of this battle will be able to tire or even discourage us. Before us stands the eternal life of our people. No matter how long it may take to bring this life to realization, nothing can shake us, nothing can perplex us, nothing can bring us to dispair —on the contrary, whatever the other world may choose, that it will get!"

No Official Reply

Authoritative quarters said no response had come yet to Hitler's peace bid of Friday from responsible statesmen in England or France. These quarters declined to comment on any other reaction to Der Fuehrer's Reichstag speech because "it would not be in the interests of peace."

Hitler said he was opening the annual relief drive—which this year will combine its work with the Red Cross—in a spirit that Germany, "without being interfered with by others, can within its living space, mould its own destiny and partake of the goods of the world to which it has a right."

val forces on the frontiers of neighboring Baltic states.

The whole of Finland, concentrated its attention on the forthcoming conversations between a Finnish delegation and Soviet Russian officials in Moscow. The delegation was expected in Moscow tomorrow.

Many Finns were asking whether the Russians, who ruled Finland, in the days of the Czars, would demand military and economic concessions such as they have gained from Estonia and Latvia.

If so, one responsible Finnish source said, the nation would resistg reluctantly but with determination. Thus a nation whose population was estimated in 1937 at 3,834,-662 persons would be arrayed against the estimated 170,000,000 populations of Russia.

Crowd Transportation Lines

The fleeing women and children crowded transportation lines in their voluntary exodus. At the same time, the interior minister Uuho Kekkonen, appealed to all who could do so to leave Helsinki and Viipuri, a port city, as soon as possible.

The Finnish delegation will discuss unannounced economic and political problems with the Russians. In similar conferences with Estonia and Latvia, Russia has gaine dsweeping concessions of naval and military rights and her troops were ready to march into those nations to make the agreements effective.

Russia also was massing warships at Kranstadt, huge naval base near Leningrad and less than 100 miles from Viipurri. Leningrad is approximately 200 miles from Helsinki, straight across the upper tip of the Gulf of Finland.

Lithuania Backs Russia

A third Baltic nation, Luthuania, has engaged in conversations with Russia. A dispatch from Kaunas said Lithuania had decided to ratify the Soviet- Lithuanian mutual assistance pact in the form proposed by Moscow. The pact would give back to the Lithuanians their ancient capital of Wilno(Vilna), seized by Poland in 1920 but now in Russian - occupied territory.

Since Russia has shown an interest in Finland, the radio and newspapers in the tiny country have been instructing the people in air defense measures.

Snow, welcomed by the Finns as a major defense during winter, fell in flurries today and the city went through a practice blackout tonight.

Despite the snow and the blackout, however, Finns gathered by the thousands in city squares to discuss the Moscow missions.

Russia Active on All Baltic Frontiers

By WITT HANCOCK

Moscow, Oct. 10 (AP)—Soviet Russia backed her intensive drive for dominance in the Baltic tonight with unceasing military and naval activity.

Hundreds of thousands of Soviet troops massed along the frontiers facing the Baltic states. Dispatches from Kronstadt, the big naval base near Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland, said that "a whole armada of battleships" was concentrated there.

Sailors were reported studying the geography of the Baltic states as well as the habits of the people and reports from the frontier said "military trains go daily to the Baltic Sea." Leingrad is about twenty-five miles from the Finnish border.

The concentration of naval strength at Kgonstadt, only a few miles from Finnish territorial waters coincided with the impending arrival here tomorrow of a Finnish delegation to discuss unspecified economic and political problems.

The Finnish delegation, headed by Dr. Juho Kustpaasikivi Finnish minister to Stockholm, follows representatives of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, which like Finland, received invitations from the Kremlin for Moscow discussions.

Previous conferences have resulted in sweeping naval and air base concessions by Estonia and Latvia as Russian vigorously pressed campaign to regain the dominant position in the Baltic Sea she held before the World War.

Soviet leaders already are in conference with representatives of Lithuania and Turkey, who are here. Other Soviet officials are discussion a trade agreement with German delegates who seek to reinforce the Reich's wartime economy, making Moscow the continued center of European diplomatic activity.

Foreign quarters saw the Soviets taking advantage of the preoccupation of Britain, France and Germany with war, to strengthen her frontiers and solidify her position.

The Russian press reported that Sweden had purchased 102 warplanes and 10 torpedo boats from Germany under an agreement made prior to the outbreak of the war.

Moscow papers continued to attack Britain and France and indicate they were responsible for the continuance of hostilities.

At the same time, the government's moves seemed to indicate she intended to seize any strategic advantages which would be of immense value in the event Russia ever went to war against Germany.

Asked whether the story about Pete represented the extent to which he wished to discuss the peace question, the president said it was.

Doubts Peace Story

The president said in reply that he did not think much of the press story, referring to news that Hitler would welcome an armistice proposal.

Asked whether he had further information about operations of foreign submarines in the Caribbean area, the president said he had none for the press.

White House officials reported Saturday the sighting of a submarine fifteen miles off Miami, Fla. Yesterday they reported an undersea craft off Key West, Fla., although they said it might have been the same one noted Saturday.

Two foreign tankers also were said to have been observed in the same vicinity as the submarine near Key West.

Asked about the possibility that foreign vessels were handling oil for Mexico, Mr. Roosevelt declared he had no news on that.

He left the impression that the submarines had been identified definitely, but did not disclose their nationalities.

Discusses Safety Zone

The question of the neutral zone set up off the American continents at the recent conference of American republics at Panama figured in the press conference when a reporter noted that a London newspaper (Times) had said editorially that enforcement of the safety zone might constitute an act of war.

The trouble with such questions, Mr. Roosevelt said, is that they are essentially if questions, so he could not answer them.

Asked to clarify the facts about the neutrality belt, the president asserted that if reporters would just quit making guesses, they would see it work out all right.

He said that the principles enunciated at the Panama conference would have to be observed.

Wild Scenes in New Orleans Mark Move To Remove District Attorney

New Orleans, Oct. 10 (AP) —An effort to impeach District Attorney Charles A. Byrne of New Orleans moved ahead tonight after 5,000 booing persons gathered before Byrne's offices demanding his recall and loudly hissed and denounced the name of Governor Earl K. Long.

Civil Judge Harold A. Moise announced he would appoint an attorney tomorrow to institute impeachment proceedings against the prosecutor in accordance with a request of twenty-five citizens who filed a petition charging Byrne with "incompetence, favoritism and gross misconduct" in office.

The mass meeting and petition came on the heels of another petition, which caused an uproar in criminal district court yesterday when Judge George P. Platt refused to permit it to be read. In this petition seven members of the Orleans parish grand jury accused Byrne of frustrating work of the body, and asked his removal as its counsel.

Two jurors were held for an hour and then dismissed from the body by Platt.

Long, who hurried to New Orleans this afternoon, was not available for comment on reports three federal investigators questioned him in his capitol office yesterday. The federal grand jury in session here has indicted Former Governor Richard W. Leche, Seymour Weiss and other leading politicians.

Prolonged boos, yells and hisses rang across the criminal court building's steps when the name of Long was mentioned by T. Hale Boggs, chairman of the People's League which called the meeting. He was reading a petition to the governor asking a recall election on Bryne.

"Let's throw Long out, too," many cried. Long became governor when Leche resigned four months ago.

Boggs ended the meeting with the assertion the time had come for "action' 'and said the state must "be redeemed," and all "corrupt politicians removed once and for all from public office."

Robert G. Elliott, Executioner of 300 Murderers, Dies in Retirement

BY WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—Robert G. Elliott, a gaunt and tragic old man sick of the sight and memory of death—whose "hired man" he long had been as the executioner of Sing Sing and the prisons of four other eastern states—died today in retirement.

He succumbed, at 65, to heart trouble. Thus ended a persistent illness that began in the early summer and forced a respite for the man who stood at the head of the most macabre of all the world's unhappy professions—a man who in the thirteen years of his gloomy career had turned the death house switch to end the lives of more than 300 convicted murderers.

Executed Hauptmann

Among those upon whom he had executed the last commands of the courts were Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby; Ruth Snyder and her paramour, Judd Gray; Sacco and Vanzetti, the accused Massachusetts killers whose conviction stirred world-wide clamor; "two - gun" Crowley, the notorious New York City badman.

Always Elliott was the very symbol of legal impersonalism in his ugly job; always he made it plain that in his mind there was no sense of wrongdoing—that he was but a robot instrument of the law of capital punishment.

But while he served that law silently and with a frightening aptitude, he never believed in it and never dodged saying so.

Keep on Coming

"It doesn't do any good, he would mutter. "There is a certain satisfaction the state gets . . . A sort of revenge. But we keep on getting these terrible criminals just the same."

His work, centering mostly at Sing Sing but performed also in the prisons of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut, hed restricted and shadowed the little area of his life. Not even to his children did he disclose the nature of his trade; all those who were close to him knew him by the affectionate and kindly nickname of "pop."

Toward the end of his career the ghastly repetitiousness of death house scenes had cut through the hard mask of his accustomed calm, and the states affected set out quickly to find substitutes—called "Mr. X"—to do the job.

As quietly as any aging bookkeeper, he lived in a typically suburban house in Queens—a house wrecked in 1928 by a never-traced bomb planted shortly after the Sacco-Vanzetti execution — but periodically the serenity of his days would be broken by a certain summons.

Then he would leave the little house in Queens, his worn black satchel—a satchel in which he carried certain of the implements of death—swinging gently by his side.

Germans Striking At French Lines On Western Front

Attack Behind "Suicide Squads" with Large Units

Paris, Oct. 10 (AP)—Attacking behind "suicide squads" of hand grenade throwers, German troops were reported tonight striking at French advance lines on the Western front with larger and larger units.

The French military headquarters reported all German attacks finally were repulsed. However they said it was becoming harder each day to stop the advances of German patrols which covered so much territory that they almost gave the impression of a coordinated feeler attack along a 35-mile front.

The French communique described the area of German activity in broad terms tonight as between the Moselle and Saar river, covering the line from the Luxembourg frontier to the German industrial city of Saarbrucken. The Germans have thrown their strongest advance posts around the Saar region's main city.

The night communique issued at 9 p. m. (3 p. m. E.S.T.) said:

"Very great activity of enemy reconnaisance units between the Moselle and the Saar (rivers).

Attacks Repulsed

"In this region we repulsed several surprise attacks, some of which involved quite important numbers of men."

The German advance guards renewed operations Sunday with preliminary attacks against various French outposts in restricted sectors of German soil. During the last twenty-four hours they have been increasing the range of their operations to include all of the extreme Northern half of the Northern flank of the Western front.

French military reports said the Germans were not thrown back at the first bursts of machine gun fire as in the past but sent new waves of men close enough to engage the French advance lines with hand grenades.

Almost Sure to Die

The grenade throwers faced almost certain death, the French said, as they advanced through no-man's land ahead of companies supported by automatic arms.

As they were caught in the criss-crossed machine gun fire from the French outposts, they threw themselves to the ground.

Then, at the first interval of fire those who still were alive leaped forward until they were able to pull the pins from the grenades and toss them into French shelters.

The French described the fighting as "savage" and declared the Germans paid dearly for the thrust.

Gallogly's mother refused to accompany him and stayed behind with the guards.

"Three times I returned and tried to persuade mother to come with us. I didn't want to leave her there beside the road. I intended to take her on a few miles and leave her in comfort for the night. She wouldn't go."

Gallogly said he informed gasoline station attendants that three persons were stranded "down the highway and probably needed aid."

Then he returned to the Atlantic hospital, left the prison machine in the parking lot, changed to his wife's car and fled to Anniston, Ala. for the night. The second night was spent near Memphis, Tenn., the third near Texarkana, Tex., as they drove into Dallas today.

He left his wife on a street corner and visited an attorney, who immediately took him to Sheriff Schmid's office.

O'Conor's Safety Committee Given Real Cooperation

State-Wide Drive Producing Encouraging Results at Start

Annapolis, October 10—Although openly delighted with the complete state-wide coperation manifested from beginning to end of October Safety week, Governor O'Conor and the members of his Maryland Traffic Safety Committee, in the words of a famous American patriot, "Have just begun to fight". October week is over, and the people of the state have been made definitely safety conscious, but every member of the committee realizes that there can be no let-down, even for a day, in the fight against traffic dangers on Maryland's streets and highways.

Among a number of important developments of October Safety week, one that will be bound to win instant favor with every motorist, bus and truck driver, is the plan announced by Major Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the State Roads Commission, to place below every "Arrow Curve Sign' numerals indicating the safe speed at which the curve can be negotiated.

Some Roads Not Safe at Fifty

It is Major Whitman's contention that, while the law permits a speed of fifty miles per hour on country roads, there are many portions of these roads, especially on curves, where it is not safe to travel at fifty miles per hour, and the new signs are intended to serve as a continuing warning of these danger spots. Of luminous construction they can be seen at night as well as day.

General Chairman Thomas P. Abbott, of Baltimore, is issuing a call for a meeting of the executive committee this week-end, to check the final results achieved during October Week, and to lay plans for an even more intensified campaign during the first seven days of November. Because of the lack of notice, many of the civic and fraternal organizations throughout the state did not have an opportunity to arrange Safety programs during the week just passed.

Not Fully Organized

Some of the county committees, likewise, were not fully organized in time to achieve the full results possible in their respective territories, but it is expected that they will be well prepared for November Safety week, with the result that, for this period, the state should see by far the most concerted movement in the interests of safety that ever has been attempted in Maryland.

In the meantime, permanent committees are being lined up by the executive committee, to perform the all-important work of adult and school safety education, satistical information, enforcement, engineering and legislation, without all of which, experience has shown, it is impossible to do a successful safety job.

Thousands Attend Frederick Fair

Frederick, Md., Oct. 10 (AP)—With the temperature approaching the gay nineties, thousands turned out today for the opening of the seventy-ninth annual Frederick fair.

Fair officials said the last inch of exhibit space was gone and the new horse barn, completed this spring, was filled to overflowing with some animals put in stalls usually alloted to horses entered in the harness races.

As the opening-day crowd stormed through the gates into the concession area, Lee Ranneberger, superintendent of concessions, issued a last-minute warning that "there would be absolutely no gambling" and that anyone violating the rule would be put off the grounds.

Races were on the program this afternoon, and also will be run tomorrow and Thursday. Motorcycle races will be run Friday, the fair's closing day.

Apple Production Forecast Lower

Washington, Oct. 10. (AP)—A 1939 commercial apple production of 100,998,000 bushels was forecast today by the corp reporting board on the basis of orchard conditions on October 1.

The estimate, two per cent below the forecast of September 1, was five per cent above the ten year average production of 96,469,000 bushels but thirteen per cent below the relatively large crop of 1937.

The board said dry, hot weather in many states, some worm damage, poor sizes in some sections and heavy cullage forced it to reduce its September estimate.

It said, however, that the quality of the early harvested commercial pack was generally considered to be good. Late varieties, it added, were sizing well. In both varieties, however, there had been considerable loss. Works took their toll and were expected to add to the damage of fruit still on the trees in the Pacific northwest. Wind robbed producers of many of their apples in the mid-western areas.

Ex-Commissioner Dies

Rockville, Md., Oct. 10 (AP)—William Frank Ricketts, 67, former Montgomery county commissioner, died at his home today. He suffered a paralytic stroke last March.

Daladier in Fiery Speech Gives Signal for European War To Go On

would only consecrate conquests by deceit or violence and would not prevent preparation for new ones."

"What, in fact, does the latest speech before the Reichstag amount to?" he demanded.

Belittles Hitler Speech

"This: I destroyed Poland, I am satisfied; let's stop the combat; let's hold a conference to consecrate my conquests and organize peace."

The premier suggested that if France accepted Hitler's present proposals and demobilized under vain promises" in a few months time she would have to face "abrupt aggression." France and Britain, he said, were "obliged to fight because Germany wanted to impose on them her domination over Europe."

"We have taken up arms against aggression. We lay them down only when we have certain guarantees of security—of security which may not be into doubt every six months."

Daladied did not go beyond demanding "reciprocal guarantees excluding any surprise and erecting a barrier against any attempt at domination."

Chamberlain Speaks Next

Many diplomatic observers believed that he paved the way for a further exposition of the Allies' position by Prime Minister Chamberlain before the House of Commons Thursday.

He made it plain that he considered Hitler's past promises worthless.

The premier also left the impression that any promises written into a future peace treaty would have to be based on physical control which would guarantee that the Germans would not seek to continue the path of conquest which crossed Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

These three countries, he asserted were only steps "on the path which would have brought France and Europe to the Harshest of slaveries."

Must Correct Abuses

If peace really is desired, he said, "it will be necessary first to calm the revolted consciences, correct abuses of force and conciliate honestly the rights and interests of all peoples."

"They say that the fate of Poland concerns only two powers. We reply that it interests also and first of all the Poles."

Turning to the process of the war, Daladier declared:

"For a month our soldiers have advanced on enemy territory. In the air our aviators have multiplied the proofs of their courage.

"On the sea our sailors have assured free communications of France with her empire, pursued enemy submarines, captured hundreds of thousands of tons of raw material destined for Germany."

The premier referred derisively to Germany's radio propaganda campaign to try to separate Britain and France.

These broadcasts, he said, were drowned out by the "uninterrupted rumbling of convoys which were taking soldiers and cannon of the British army toward our frontiers."

Hitler Says Allies Will Be To Blame If European War Continues

By EDWIN SHANKE

Berlin, Oct. 10 (AP)—Adolf Hitler declared today that "Germany is determined to take up the battle and fight it through" if the Western Allies rebuff "our readiness for peace."

If the war goes on the Western Allies will be to blame, he said in a speech opening the Nazi winter relief campaign, but they never will "see any sort of German capitulation."

"We do not know what the future will bring," he said, "but we are clear about one thing—no power on earth will again bring Germany to its knees. They will not defeat us militarily, nor destroy us economically, nor break our spirit. Under no circumstances will they live to see any sort of German capitulation."

The decision regarding peace or continuance of the war, he said, "no longer lies with us, but with the other side."

"With us exists only the grim determination to abide by the decision, whatever it may be, and to fight through to the last end," he declared.

Speaks in Angry Tones

His 21-minute speech, delivered in angry tones at the huge Sportspalast, came at the end of a day during which false rumors of an armistice sent Berliners into manifestations of joy. Official denial brought a halt to impromptu celebrations.

Many described the rumor as a "1918 false armistice in miniature." Government offices and newspaper bureaus were flooded with calls from persons seeking confirmation. Germans threw their arms around one another and wept for joy. In one plant 200 workers laid down their tools "to celebrate."

Then came the solemn radio announcement that the rumors were the products of the London "ministry of lies" and finally Der Fuehrer's defiant address in the favorite rally hall of the Nazi party, the Sportspalast, which was packed with 35,000 winter relief workers.

Asserting as he did in his Reichstag speech last Friday that Germany has no war aims against England and France, Hitler said:

"I have expressed our readiness for peace. In case this readiness on our part is declined, then Germany is determined to take up the battle and fight it through.

"Neither fright of the moment nor a proclamation of the length of this battle will be able to tire or even discourage us. Before us stands the eternal life of our people. No matter how long it may take to bring this life to realization, nothing can shake us, nothing can perplex us, nothing can bring us to dispair —on the contrary, whatever the other world may choose, that it will get!"

No Official Reply

Authoritative quarters said no response had come yet to Hitler's peace bid of Friday from responsible statesmen in England or France. These quarters declined to comment on any other reaction to Der Fuehrer's Reichstag speech because "it would not be in the interests of peace."

Hitler said he was opening the annual relief drive—which this year will combine its work with the Red Cross—in a spirit that Germany, "without being interfered with by others, can within its living space, mould its own destiny and partake of the goods of the world to which it has a right."

Finns Quit

val forces on the frontiers of neighboring Baltic states.

The whole of Finland, concentrated its attention on the forthcoming conversations between a Finnish delegation and Soviet Russian officials in Moscow. The delegation was expected in Moscow tomorrow.

Many Finns were asking whether the Russians, who ruled Finland, in the days of the Czars, would demand military and economic concessions such as they have gained from Estonia and Latvia.

If so, one responsible Finnish source said, the nation would resistg reluctantly but with determination. Thus a nation whose population was estimated in 1937 at 3,834,662 persons would be arrayed against the estimated 170,000,000 populations of Russia.

Crowd Transportation Lines

The fleeing women and children crowded transportation lines in their voluntary exodus. At the same time, the interior minister Uuho Kekkonen, appealed to all who could do so to leave Helsinki and Viipuri, a port city, as soon as possible.

The Finnish delegation will discuss unannounced economic and political problems with the Russians. In similar conferences with Estonia and Latvia, Russia has gaine dsweeping concessions of naval and military rights and her troops were ready to march into those nations to make the agreements effective.

Russia also was massing warships at Kranstadt, huge naval base near Leningrad and less than 100 miles from Viipurri. Leningrad is approximately 200 miles from Helsinki, straight across the upper tip of the Gulf of Finland.

Lithuania Backs Russia

A third Baltic nation, Luthuania, has engaged in conversations with Russia. A dispatch from Kaunas said Lithuania had decided to ratify the Soviet- Lithuanian mutual assistance pact in the form proposed by Moscow. The pact would give back to the Lithuanians their ancient capital of Wilno(Vilna), seized by Poland in 1920 but now in Russian - occupied territory.

Since Russia has shown an interest in Finland, the radio and newspapers in the tiny country have been instructing the people in air defense measures.

Snow, welcomed by the Finns as a major defense during winter, fell in flurries today and the city went through a practice blackout tonight.

Despite the snow and the blackout, however, Finns gathered by the thousands in city squares to discuss the Moscow missions.

Russia Active on All Baltic Frontiers

By WITT HANCOCK

Moscow, Oct. 10 (AP)—Soviet Russia backed her intensive drive for dominance in the Baltic tonight with unceasing military and naval activity.

Hundreds of thousands of Soviet troops massed along the frontiers facing the Baltic states. Dispatches from Kronstadt, the big naval base near Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland, said that "a whole armada of battleships" was concentrated there.

Sailors were reported studying the geography of the Baltic states as well as the habits of the people and reports from the frontier said "military trains go daily to the Baltic Sea." Leingrad is about twenty-five miles from the Finnish border.

The concentration of naval strength at Kgonstadt, only a few miles from Finnish territorial waters coincided with the impending arrival here tomorrow of a Finnish delegation to discuss unspecified economic and political problems.

The Finnish delegation, headed by Dr. Juho Kustpaasikivi Finnish minister to Stockholm, follows representatives of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, which like Finland, received invitations from the Kremlin for Moscow discussions.

Previous conferences have resulted in sweeping naval and air base concessions by Estonia and Latvia as Russian vigorously pressed campaign to regain the dominant position in the Baltic Sea she held before the World War.

Soviet leaders already are in conference with representatives of Lithuania and Turkey, who are here. Other Soviet officials are discussion a trade agreement with German delegates who seek to reinforce the Reich's wartime economy, making Moscow the continued center of European diplomatic activity.

Foreign quarters saw the Soviets taking advantage of the preoccupation of Britain, France and Germany with war, to strengthen her frontiers and solidify her position.

The Russian press reported that Sweden had purchased 102 warplanes and 10 torpedo boats from Germany under an agreement made prior to the outbreak of the war.

Moscow papers continued to attack Britain and France and indicate they were responsible for the continuance of hostilities.

At the same time, the government's moves seemed to indicate she intended to seize any strategic advantages which would be of immense value in the event Russia ever went to war against Germany.

The next day Eve was trying to make up for the discomfort she had caused them and snuggled up to Adam and remarked that she had seen something in the papers.

Adam stopped her by saying, wait a minute, honey, wait a minute, you see by the papers—but don't forget that since yesterday afternoon I'm wise.

Asked whether the story about Pete represented the extent to which he wished to discuss the peace question, the president said it was.

Doubts Peace Story

The president said in reply that he did not think much of the press story, referring to news that Hitler would welcome an armistice proposal.

Asked whether he had further information about operations of foreign submarines in the Caribbean area, the president said he had none for the press.

White House officials reported Saturday the sighting of a submarine fifteen miles off Miami, Fla. Yesterday they reported an undersea craft off Key West, Fla., although they said it might have been the same one noted Saturday.

Two foreign tankers also were said to have been observed in the same vicinity as the submarine near Key West.

Asked about the possibility that foreign vessels were handling oil for Mexico, Mr. Roosevelt declared he had no news on that.

Discusses Safety Zone

The question of the neutral zone set up off the American continents at the recent conference of American republics at Panama figured in the press conference when a reporter noted that a London newspaper (Times) had said editorially that enforcement of the safety zone might constitute an act of war.

The trouble with such questions, Mr. Roosevelt said, is that they are essentially if questions, so he could not answer them.

Asked to clarify the facts about the neutrality belt, the president asserted that if reporters would just quit making guesses, they would see it work out all right.

He said that the principles enunciated at the Panama conference would have to be observed.

A St. John's alumnus, Dr. Parran succeeds Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, who will remain a member of the board.

Wild Scenes in New Orleans Mark Move To Remove District Attorney

New Orleans, Oct. 10 (AP) —An effort to impeach District Attorney Charles A. Byrne of New Orleans moved ahead tonight after 5,000 booing persons gathered before Byrne's offices demanding his recall and loudly hissed and denounced the name of Governor Earl K. Long.

Civil Judge Harold A. Moise announced he would appoint an attorney tomorrow to institute impeachment proceedings against the prosecutor in accordance with a request of twenty-five citizens who filed a petition charging Byrne with "incompetence, favoritism and gross misconduct" in office.

"The mass meeting and petition came on the heels of another petition, which caused an uproar in criminal district court yesterday when Judge George P. Platt refused to permit it to be read. In this petition seven members of the Orleans parish grand jury accused Byrne of frustrating work of the body, and asked his removal as its counsel.

Two jurors were held for an hour and then dismissed from the body by Platt.

Long, who hurried to New Orleans this afternoon, was not available for comment on reports three federal investigators questioned him in his capitol office yesterday. The federal grand jury in session here has indicted Former Governor Richard W. Leche, Seymour Weiss and other leading politicians.

Prolonged boos, yells and hisses rang across the criminal court building's steps when the name of Long was mentioned by T. Hale Boggs, chairman of the People's League which called the meeting. He was reading a petition to the governor asking a recall election on Bryne.

"Let's throw Long out, too," many cried. Long became governor when Leche resigned four months ago.

Boggs ended the meeting with the assertion the time had come for "action' 'and said the state must "be redeemed," and all "corrupt politicians removed once and for all from public office."

Robert G. Elliott, Executioner of 300 Murderers, Dies in Retirement

BY WILLIAM S. WHITE

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—Robert G. Elliott, a gaunt and tragic old man sick of the sight and memory of death—whose "hired man" he long had been as the executioner of Sing Sing and the prisons of four other eastern states—died today in retirement.

He succumbed, at 65, to heart trouble. Thus ended a persistent illness that began in the early summer and forced a respite for the man who stood at the head of the most macabre of all the world's unhappy professions—a man who in the thirteen years of his gloomy career had turned the death house switch to end the lives of more than 300 convicted murderers.

Executed Hauptmann

Among those upon whom he had executed the last commands of the courts were Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby; Ruth Snyder and her paramour, Judd Gray; Sacco and Vanzetti, the accused Massachusetts killers whose conviction stirred world-wide clamor; "two-gun" Crowley, the notorious New York City badman.

Always Elliott was the very symbol of legal impersonalism in his ugly job; always he made it plain that in his mind there was no sense of wrongdoing—that he was but a robot instrument of the law of capital punishment.

But while he served that law silently and with a frightening aptitude, he never believed in it and never dodged saying so.

Keep on Coming

"It doesn't do any good, he would mutter. "There is a certain satisfaction the state gets . . . A sort of revenge. But we keep on getting these terrible criminals just the same."

His work, centering mostly at Sing Sing but performed also in the prisons of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut, hed restricted and shadowed the little area of his life. Not even to his children did he disclose the nature of his trade; all those who were close to him knew him by the affectionate and kindly nickname of "pop."

Toward the end of his career the ghastly repetitiousness of death house scenes had cut through the hard mask of his accustomed calm, and the states affected set out quickly to find substitutes—called "Mr. X"—to do the job.

As quietly as any aging bookkeeper, he lived in a typically suburban house in Queens—a house wrecked in 1928 by a never-traced bomb planted shortly after the Sacco-Vanzetti execution — but periodically the serenity of his days would be broken by a certain summons.

Then he would leave the little house in Queens, his worn black satchel—a satchel in which he carried certain of the implements of death—swinging gently by his side.

Germans Striking At French Lines On Western Front

Attack Behind "Suicide Squads" with Large Units

Paris, Oct. 10 (AP)—Attacking behind "suicide squads" of hand grenade throwers, German troops were reported tonight striking at French advance lines on the Western front with larger and larger units.

The French military headquarters reported all German attacks finally were repulsed. However they said it was becoming harder each day to stop the advances of German patrols which covered so much territory that they almost gave the impression of a coordinated feeler attack along a 35-mile front.

The French communique described the area of German activity in broad terms tonight as between the Moselle and Saar river, covering the line from the Luxembourg frontier to the German industrial city of Saarbrucken. The Germans have thrown their strongest advance posts around the Saar region's main city.

The night communique issued at 9 p. m. (3 p. m. E.S.T.) said:

"Very great activity of enemy reconnaisance units between the Moselle and the Saar (rivers).

Attacks Repulsed

"In this region we repulsed several surprise attacks, some of which involved quite important numbers of men."

The German advance guards renewed operations Sunday with preliminary attacks against various French outposts in restricted sectors of German soil. During the last twenty-four hours they have been increasing the range of their operations to include all of the extreme Northern half of the Northern flank of the Western front.

French military reports said the Germans were not thrown back by the first bursts of machine gun fire as in the past but sent new waves of men close enough to engage the French advance lines with hand grenades.

Almost Sure to Die

The grenade throwers faced almost certain death, the French said as they advanced through no-man's land ahead of companies supported by automatic arms.

As they were caught in the cross-crossed machine gun fire from the French outposts, they threw themselves to the ground.

Then, at the first interval of fire those who still were alive leaped forward until they were able to pull the pins from the grenades and toss them into French shelters.

The French described the fighting as "savage" and declared the Germans paid dearly for the thrust.

"Three times I returned and tried to persuade mother to come with us. I didn't want to leave her there beside the road. I intended to take her on a few miles and leave her in comfort for the night. She wouldn't go."

Gallogly said he informed gasoline station attendants that three persons were stranded "down the highway and probably needed aid."

Then he returned to the Atlanta hospital, left the prison machine in the parking lot, changed to his wife's car and fled to Anniston, Ala., for the night. The second night was spent near Memphis, Tenn., the third near Texarkana, Tex., after they drove into Dallas today.

Swapping Job Idea Prompts Many Letters

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Two or three weeks ago this column printed a cross-section of life in the shape of a letter—a real human document.

The writer was a married woman with several children. She had been her husband's secretary, knew all the ramifications of his business and was bored to tears with housework without help, but kept going on because she loved her family and felt she was only doing her duty.

Came one evening when she sank into a chair to read the paper and catch her breath. Said friend husband: "Wish I had nothing to do like you, but stay home, keep house, relax in an easy chair and read the paper. I put in terribly long hours at the office, am worried to death over business, have to crawl and do a lot of bootlicking to get orders—I'm sick of it."

Said the lady: "Let's swap. I know all about your business. You keep house for a couple of weeks and I'll run your office."

Like Heaven at First

After considerable argument, he consented. And the lady fared forth and took her husband's desk. As she wrote this paper, at first it seemed like Heaven, the neat office after the child clutter always under foot at home. The endless meal preparation, dish-washing, bed-making, and so on. And in spite of these so-called unmanly chores, the gentleman, for the first few days, enjoyed staying home immensely. He had a certain pride in his cooking and the older boy swept under the beds and made them too—after a fashion.

Then the lady began to worry about her children, two of whom had colds, and the gentleman began to think longingly of his roll-top and his swivel chair—to say nothing of the orders his wife might be missing.

So very gradually, the cat crept out of the bag—each would like to have back his and her appointed job. They had a good deal of fun over the swap and decided that this wouldn't be the last time they'd take a turn-about when the old grind began to seem intolerable.

Scores of Letters

This column has received scores of letters from all over the country about this exchange of jobs. And while not many married women would be capable of holding down their husbands' desks, and Heaven help the children tended to by their fathers, still a very perceptible yearning to swap temporarily is apparent. Husbands think that wives have the better of it, and wives are sure that friend husband, in going out to work, is blessed by the gods. Here are a couple of letters. We'll be glad to publish yours, if you've something to say on this subject.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"The women, if they'd only see it, have it all their own way. We men have to sweat and strain to keep the roof over our families. All we ask is a smile, and peace when we get home.

MERE MAN."

Can't Swap Now

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Alas, that I never was my husband's secretary, so I can't swap jobs with him, more's the pity! But I sure would like to. Nothing but mess, mess, from morning 'till night. Milk modifying, diaper washing, spinach straining, vitamines! My grandmother raised ten and never heard the word—Then cooking for the big He-man, after the youngsters are tucked away. Would I like to swap jobs, would I —? SLAVEY-WIFE."

Wants Her Only as Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Recently I became acquainted with a very nice young man, with whom I became friendly, and before long I found I was in love with him. One night he became rather talkative and said he could never care for another girl, because one gave him what he called "a dirty deal." Then he said I was too nicee a girl for him.

I told him I liked him well enough not to let this other affair worry me. He said he though more of me than of any other girl he knew and would like to keep me as a friend. But to me that's impossible. I've tried to forget him and go out with other men, but they bore me to tears. And once in a while he leads me to believe he does care a little for me.

NO PATIENCE

When a man tells a girl he wants her only as a friend it's evident he doesn't want to become entangled in a love affair and that an engagement is out of the question. Doubtless this young man doesn't feel he makes enough to marry at present, and to him marriage is in the distant future. You can't blame him, then, for trying to keep his relations with girls on a friendly basis.

It's possible you know, that he may fall in love with you, and it's also possiblee he may get a job which will enable him to marry. As to the other girl, I'd forget about her. At the same time, I wouldn't take him too seriously.

Swapping Job Idea Prompts Many Letters

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Two or three weeks ago this column printed a cross-section of life in the shape of a letter—a real human document.

The writer was a married woman with several children. She had been her husband's secretary, knew all the ramifications of his business and was bored to tears with housewerk without help, but kept going on because she loved her family and felt she was only doing her duty.

Came one evening when she sank into a chair to read the paper and catch her breath. Said friend husband: "Wish I had nothing to do like you, but stay home, keep house, relax in an easy chair and read the paper. I put in terribly long hours at the office, am worried to death over business, have to crawl and do a lot of bootlicking to get orders—I'm sick of it."

Said the lady: "Let's swap. I know all about your business. You keep house for a couple of weeks and I'll run your office."

Like Heaven at First

After considerable argument, he consented. And the lady fared forth and took her husband's desk. As she wrote this paper, at first it seemed like Heaven, the neat office after the child clutter always under foot at home. The endless meal preparation, dish-washing, bed-making, and so on. And in spite of these so-called unmanly chores, the gentleman, for the first few days, enjoyed staying home immensely. He had a certain pride in his cooking and the older boy job. They had a good deal of fun over the swap and decided that this wouldn't be the last time they'd take a turn-about when the old grind began to seem intolerable.

Scores of Letters

This column has received scores of letters from all over the country about this exchange of jobs. And while not many married women would be capable of holding down their husbands' desks, and Heaven help the children tended to by their fathers, still a very perceptible yearning to swap temporarily is apparent. Husbands think that wives have the better of it, and wives are sure that friend husband, in going out to work, is blessed by the gods. Here are a couple of letters. We'll be glad to publish yours, if you've something to say on this subject.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"The women, if they'd only see it, have it all their own way. We men have to sweat and strain to keep the roof over our families. All we ask is a smile, and peace when we get home.

MERE MAN."

Can't Swap Now

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Alas, that I never was my husband's secretary, so I can't swap jobs with him, more's the pity! But I sure would like to. Nothing but mess, mess, from morning 'till night. Milk modifying, diaper washing, spinach straining, vitamines! My grandmother raised ten and never heard the word—Then cooking for the big He-man, after the youngsters are tucked away. Would I like to swap jobs, would I —? SLAVEY-WIFE."

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Wants Her Only as Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Recently I became acquainted with a very nice young man, with whom I became friendly, and before long I found I was in love with him. One night he became rather talkative and said he could never care for another girl, because one gave him what he called "a dirty deal." Then he said I was too nicee a girl for him.

I told him I liked him well enough not to let this other affair worry me. He said he though more of me than of any other girl he knew and would like to keep me as a friend. But to me that's impossible. I've tried to forget him and go out with other men, but they bore me to tears. And once in a while he leads me to believe he does care a little for me.

NO PATIENCE

When a man tells a girl he wants her only as a friend it's evident he doesn't want to become entangled in a love affair and that an engagement is out of the question. Doubtless this young man doesn't feel he makes enough to marry at present, and to him marriage is in the distant future. You can't blame him, then, for trying to keep his relations with girls on a friendly basis.

It's possible you know, that he may fall in love with you, and it's also possiblee he may get a job which will enable him to marry. As to the other girl, I'd forget about her. At the same time, I wouldn't take him too seriously.

GRACE ON ICE

Grace and rhythm of six-year-old Irene Barton (Irene Dare) is shown in Hawaiian hula dance on ice for a movie in the making.

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Realism

IT is disturbing to note from a recent Gallup poll that an amazingly large number of Americans are obsessed with a fantastic delusion that Hitler may crush England and France and then come over here and nonchalantly take possession of the United States.

Such simple credulity might be amusing did it not constitute a grave danger to our peace and security. The danger is that any such widespread hysteria of fear may warp the collective judgment of our people and prompt unreasoning acts that might lead to our involvement in the European conflict.

Unwarranted apprehension of an imaginary war in the future might be just the thing to push us into a very real war in the present.

It is the kind of thing to make the propagandists who want us to take sides and sit in on the international poker game smack their lips with relish. They know that one of the greatest of all appeals is the appeal to fear.

Grotesque as is this Hitler bugaboo, it would be neither good sportsmanship nor ordinary fair dealing to ridicule those who are afflicted with such Nazi jitters. The germ was implanted with loose talk about "our frontiers in France." The infection was spread by the hysterical vaporing of certain writers whose judgment the public had come to regard as at least well-balanced and free from emotionalism. It is regrettable that of late they have perverted their unquestioned talents to making of Hitler the kind of bogey man that frightened us into hiding our heads in the bed covers when we were children.

Let's not go into any long discussion of the many political, economic and military reasons why Hitler cherishes no such grandoise ambitions and why he couldn't realize them if he did. A few simple facts suffice.

To crush France, he would have to smash the Maginot line. Military experts estimate that this would cost 750,000 lives, if, indeed, it could be done at all because of factors not of a military nature.

Then there stands in the way the might of the British navy. Effective as submarines have been against merchant shipping, they have been unimpressive against warships. They are not adapted to mass attack against a battle fleet. They are furtive raiders—lone wolves of the sea.

All recent experience, moreover, shows conclusively that although the airplane is a valuable military adjunct, if objectives are to be taken and territory occupied the infantry still must do the job.

One needn't be reminded that our navy today is the finest in the world and is getting better every day. Neither does one have to be reminded that the Atlantic ocean is still 3,000 miles across, nor rehearse the lessons of Gallipoli.

Let's keep our shirts on and our powder dry. The danger isn't that Hitler may attack us. It is that emotion may lead us into the pitfall of war that sound judgment would have avoided.

Boomerang Propaganda

AN ASSUMPTION that British officialdom is stupid because it is slow is not invariably safe, even when held by other Britons, as it has been in the matter of releasing war information.

Slow it surely is, as we have reason to know. Meanwhile, the Germans have been very accommodating in providing timely pictures of their feats of arms in Poland, of the irresistible progress of a great mechanized army across a prostrate land, of bombers raining destruction, and tanks and artillery spraying death on every hand. It all testifies to Nazi military might, and is calculated to dazzle and impress. The question remains if, in the long view, this is not poorer propaganda for its sponsors than it is for the Allies.

It portrays in a very graphic way the reason why Britain and France are committed to a war which will exterminate Hitlerism. As long as the rest of Europe remains under the threat of the things revealed and implied in these pictures from Poland, life in its ordinary meaning is impossible, the Allies contend.

The propagandists of London could wish for nothing better to illustrate the point of their case than the material provided the world by the efficient information service of the Nazi war office. Often, the "stupidity" of the Briton in the public service is only seeming; and so it may be here. Why should he interfere now if the foe is offering an eloquent, if unintended, exposition of the case for the Allies?

War Profits Taxes

IN CONNECTION with the discussion in Washington about framing new war profits taxes, congressmen are being reminded by various business men and their organizations that different conditions obtain now than back in 1917-18, and that such taxes, if superimposed, should be carefully laid with that difference in view.

According to a treasury estimate made in 1931, taxes took about seventy per cent of the difference between the profits of the war years and of pre-war years. These taxes began in 1916, a year before we went in, with a rate of twenve and one-half per cent laid on the profits of munition-makers in addition to the regular individual and corporation income levies. In 1917 a real excess profits tax was levied with rates running from twenty to sixty per cent. In that year it brought in almost $1,850,000,000, or more than twice the total treasury receipts from all sources in the preceding year.

In 1918 a war profits tax was levied in addition running from thirty to sixty-five per cent. The sum total of the two taxes, plus a corporation income tax of twelve per cent, was, for the top-notchers, ninety-two per cent of net income. These taxes brought in $3,159,000,000, or about thrice the taxes on corporate incomes for 1939.

What it all amounted to was that the large makers of munitions worked for the army and navy twelve months in the year and for the treasury a little more than eleven.

The difference between the World war period and today lies in the fact that taxes on business and industry then were nothing as compared to what they are now and on which the new taxes would be superimposed.

There should be some curb on war profiteering, particularly in the manufacture of munitions but in general should not be of the strangulation type. Business men are not keen about excessive war profits for several reasons. One is the costly aftermath with enlarged plants, facilities and payrolls left on their hands, which will make for depression. That factor, too, should be weighed in the equation.

When Money Flies

IT USED TO BE that time was on the side of the debtor. Smith in Los Angeles owed Brown in New York $1,000 for a bill of merchandise, terms three per cent discount if paid by a certain date. The date approached and Smith didn't have the money, so he "kited" a check and mailed to Brown. Allowing five days going and the same returning, that gave him ten days grace to raise the money and cover his check before it should get back to his bank in Los Angeles for payment. Distance saved him $30.

But air mail has put a crimp in "kiting," says Nation's Business. Through its use Smith's check would be back in his bank the day after Brown deposited it in a New York bank. The kiter's margin has been reduced from days to hours. Of even more significance is the speed-up in money turnover. Brown can deposit his $1,000 and check against it at least four days sooner than formerly. With money dirt cheap as at present, four days' interest is not much of an item, but that much time gained in buying and paying for merchandise is.

In at least one large Los Angeles branch bank your check will be photographed on movie film before it goes to the airport. If the plane should come to grief and its bank mail be burned these negatives will be developed and the photographs become acceptable evidence for payment by the banks on which the checks are drawn.

Truly, the constant contraction of space and time are making a strange new world.

Appropriate

THE PAPERS of President Woodrow Wilson have been placed for permanent keeping in the Library of Congress, his official biographer, Ray Stannard Baker, having completed his use of them. In giving them to the government for the free use of the public, Mrs. Wilson has with forethought provided for a special custodian to classify and catalog them.

Such disposition of presidential papers is quite appropriate as it will contribute to the convenience of historians as well as scholars of all kind who seek light upon the war and other conditions of the time represented by the documents, as they will be important to others than biographers.

Far better it is to have such papers reposing in a public institution like the Congressional library than in some self-created shrine far from the center of governmental archives.

A Japanese newspaper claims that the United States started and is responsible for the war in Europe. And yet there are some folk who insist the Japs do not have a sense of humor!

It begins to look as though the only thing any of those European belligerents will gain out of this war is more of what they already have too many of—historic battlefields.

We haven't seen the worst of this war. Wait until it is over and all those belligerent statesmen and generals begin turning out books to explain away their mistakes.

Think of the trouble which would be prevented if those tiny, weak little European nations would stop picking on their huge greedy neighbors!

Now that the baseball season is over, this would be a good time for the other seven American league clubs to secede from the Yankees.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

In past decades or centuries, all the men with whom Britain engaged in the diplomatic tierce and riposte would have been passed by the membership committee of the gentleman's club which ran England. That gave the British foreign office both assurance and a dependable technique in empire building. The ground rules were as definite and durable as the cricket rules at Eton and Harrow.

In this pattern of international behaviour, the British gentlemen became an article of export, and international negotiation became a matter of certain ancient proprieties. This being true, I have an idea that much of the confusion and apparent bewilderment of the British high command, in the last ten years, is due to the fact that the Metternichs, the Tallyrands, the von Moltkes, the von Bernhardis have passed, and unpedigreed, uncertified and largely inexperienced power men have risen to take their places.

It would seem quite impossible that Sir Samuel Hoare, of Ye Olde Golden Bottel Bank, dating back to the reign of Charles I, could ever have known a man such as the base-born Adolf Schickelgrueber, or the scowling, ham-fisted Joseph Dshugaskvili, who came to the chancellories under the assumed names of Hitler and Stalin.

Is Embarrassing

That, in itself, is embarrassing. A man couldn't get into a good London club under an assumed name. And then there's the chest-beating blacksmith's son, Benito Mussolini, using his own name, to be sure, but given to behaviour which no responsible house committee would sanction.

One thinks of the old story of Bernhardt's Cleopatra, at the old Odeon theater in the days of Good Queen Vic. A slave reported the loss of a battle and Cleopatra, in a magnificent outburst of lurid rage smashed the furniture, tore up the draperies and pretty nearly wrecked the theater. It was Bernhardt's greatest moment of glorious abandon, and it set the French audience wild. After the tumult ebbed and the theater was hushed and expectant, a grandmotherly little Englishwoman was heard to murmur: "How unlike the home life of our own dear queen."

Contrast Is Given

One gets the contrast between British decorum and a world untutored in the ancient rubric of proper behaviour. It is no wonder that Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, visiting Hitler shortly after Munich, failed in a realistic estimate of Herr Schickelgrueber. He returned and told England:

"On no account must we fall from the height of exultation to which the world was lifted by the Munich peace."

And so it was with Halifax, MacMillan, Chamberlain, Simon, Beaverbrook and all the others of the leaders of British foreign missions to the strange Ammonites and Hittites who behave in an unseemly manner, but who, they hoped to the last, would be all right if you met them half way.

It is rare that one not a public school man has ever penetrated into the de factor government, or inner cabinet, of about thirty men who rule England. The beloved Mr. Chips has helped us get this straight, over here, the public school of England being just the reverse of ours—a school for the sons of gentlemen only.

From the Realities

This has given British statesmanship high character and culture, and it has sluiced good brains into the government, but it has isolated their leaders from certain important realities and it has concealed from them many of the political facts of life, and certainly any politician is handicapped in this day and age if he knows and understands only nice people.

We intend to restrain ourselves from smug citations of our own superiority and well-being as against Europe's tragedy, but I cannot help noting that our political way of life equips us for more realism. I'm thinking of a Senate committee I once attended, presided over by the blue-blooded and grammatical old Senator Lodge. A Missouri Senator was tossing in solecisms, and a Kansas Senator had soup on his vest. In this flux and free-for-all the homespun Senators learned to know and respect the Back Bay Brahmin and vice versa. More of that kind of milling would have done the British statesmen a lot of good in this last critical decade. — Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BLUEBEARD'S SEVENTH WIFE

Roosevelt Attitude toward Congress Prompts Members To Curb Powers

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Oct. 10 — President Roosevelt seems likely, at this time, to get approximately the neutrality measure he has asked for. (Though it is possible the debate, if it should be prolonged, might pass into a new phase; that the whole subject of neutrality might be approached from a standpoint new at this time but very old — the broad standpoint of long accepted international law.)

Mark Sullivan

If Mr. Roosevelt gets the measure he has asked for, he will get it in part by the votes of senators who, on personal grounds and public grounds, have reason to oppose him. He will get it by the votes of Democratic senators he personally tried to "purge," such as George, of Georgia, and Smith, of South Carolina; and by the votes of other Democratic senators whom Mr. Roosevelt's intimates tried to purge, such as Mr. Gillette, of Iowa. Mr. Roosevelt will get his measure by the votes of yet other Democratic Senators whom some of Mr. Roosevelt's radical followers have held up to public scorn as "Tories," such as Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia; and Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, who was the choice of most of the Democratic senators for floor leader, but who was defeated because Mr. Roosevelt put his influence behind Senator Barkley, of Kentucky. And Mr. Roosevelt will get his measure in part by the votes of some Republican senators who, disregarding partisanship, believe that in the matter of neutrality Mr. Roosevelt's proposal is better than the existing law.

Owes Debt to Congress

In this situation Mr. Roosevelt owes a debt of tolerance to Congress. He does not seem to pay it when he shows reluctance to let Congress function beyond a limit he suggests, or even to have Congress remain in Washington indefinitely. Mr. Roosevelt has made it plain that he prefers Congress, in this special session, should act on the neutrality measure and nothing else.

In this attitude Mr. Roosevelt has gone to considerable length. Recently, in expanding the army and navy, the president had occasion to make expenditures for buildings beyond the amount provided in the regular appropriation measures passed in the regular session of Congress. As a way of meeting this difficulty, Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would make the necessary expenditures anyhow, relying upon Congress to take care of the deficiency when it meets in regular session in January. The amount of money involved is slight; as a going beyond authority, the incident is not important. But members of Congress wonder why the pesident shrould not conform to rule by simply asking the present special session of Congress to make the necessary appropriation—it would consume very little time.

Preference Apparent

If these were a mere matter of expediting the neutrality measure, of avoiding interference with the neutrality debate by introduction of any other matter, Congress would understand. But it is apparent Mr. Roosevelt's preference is that this special session of Congress should deal with the Neutrality and then go home, until the regular session in January.

This position of Mr. Roosevelt, rather than speeding the neutrality measure, may impede it. Some of the leadership of Congress thinks that Congress ought to be in session more or less continuously throughout the period of emergency created by the war in Europe. Some of the time consumed in acting upon the neutrality measure will be merely a way of keeping Congress in Washington.

Also, this attitude of Mr. Roosevelt toward Congress results in his getting smaller powers than he otherwise might. The pending neutrality measure does not give the president as much power or discretion as many think that a president should have, at a time when the country faces the unpredictable day-to-day problems arising out of war abroad.

Wary of Discretion

In the belief of many, the really wise way to achieve neutrality, and to handle the problems arising from war abroad, would be to abandon completely the artificial and strained so-neutrality bill, and go back to the basis we had under a score of presidents preceding Mr. Roosevelt, for a century and a quarter preceding 1935, the basis of international law. But when this was proposed, responsible Democratic leaders said that not ten senators would vote for it. The senators would not vote for it because they are hesitant to give great power and discretion to the president.

The present president and the present Congress must get along together for nearly a year and a quarter until January 1941. The present session, special, will last as long as it lasts—that is, until the neutrality measure is disposed of. Thereafter, for six-weeks or whatnot, there will be no Congress in session. In January the regular session will begin. This regular session has no statutory limit—it could go for a full year, until January 1941. In practice, however, this session would be likely to end about July first. For 1940 is a major political year, with nominations and elections of a president, the whole membership of the House, and a third of the Senate. As a rule Congress tries to wind up its work simultaneously with the national conventions in June or July. This practice if followed next year would result in no session of Congress, unless specially called, between about July 1st and January 1st. It hardly seems probable that conditions next year will permit so long a recess.

The Will to Peace

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

In considering the question of neutrality legislation, it is well to bear in mind that we cannot keep out of war by the mere automatic functioning of a law. The Wall Street Journal puts it succinctly in this passage:

"But it must be repeated and never forgotten that no statute can keep a war away from our shores if we as a people have not the incorruptible will to stay out of it."

That thought cannot be overstressed. There is a tendency, we suspect, to place too much reliance in legislation; to feel that when we have drafted a satisfactory neutrality law, we become thereby safely insulated against war. That is a dangerous state of mind.

The best a neutrality law and a national policy can do is to lessen the likelihood of an incident developing which could lead to war. But if we are warlike in our thoughts and our expressions; if we let our sympathies or prejudices or fears run away with our common sense, we will awaken some day to find the country in the middle of this mess, law or no law.

We Can Be Self-Supporting

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

There is very little with which Mother Nature has blessed other parts of the earth that cannot be reproduced in Uncle Sam's domain. For example:

Thirty years ago there was one American date for every million imported. Today, in the Coachelle valley in California, one date is raised for every dozen brought from overseas. Growers are looking forward to the time when practically all of the 70,000,000 pounds consumed by Americans will be raised within our borders.

The valleys of Southern California and Arizona are planted with something like a quarter of a million date palms. The number is being increased rapidly.

So it is with other products of the soil. We have the conditions for their propagation in large degree, under climate conditions existing from the Canadian border to the tip of Florida and the unusual conditions existing in the Southwest. We can become a self-supporting people. All the more reason why we should not involve ourselves in the warfare of Old World nations.

Morning Motto

There is no such thing as an inevitable war. If war comes it will be from failure of human wisdom.—BONAR LAW

On the Record

By John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Chairman

The challenge presented to our party can be met only by political action. It is our solemn obligation to meet that challenge and not to dodge it by seeking refuge in an adjournment of politics at a time when our domestic problems are as critical as our foreign relations.

And we must meet that challenge soon. The party national conventions are less than a year off. In November of next year the people must choose a President of the United States. If there ever was a time when the politics of principles should not be adjourned it is now and in the months preceding that vitally important undertaking.

The real need today is for more, and not less, political alertness. It would be fatal for the nation if we permitted our preoccupation with the affairs of Europe to blind us to the state of affairs at home. The danger is all the greater since the war itself already is serving to obscure and to distort the domestic picture.

Good Man Lost in Andrews Ousting

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

HUGH JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 10.—Where is Elmer? Elmer is out on his ear. But it isn't the American Legion's Lost Battalion of Elmers. It is Elmer Andrews, administrator of the third egg of the old Blue Eagle—the Wages and Hours act.

Is Elmer out because he was incompetent, disloyal or insubordinate? Oh no, his record in public and private service is in the very top flight. Elmer is out because he tried conscientiously to administer the law he was sworn to enforce—because he would not kow-tow like a coward to the sub-service machinations of the palace janissariat who wanted to pervert it. Elmer is a victim of the lethal syrup of our modern political Lucretia Borgia, Muddom Perkins.

Similar tactics on her part first undermined and then destroyed the president's NRA—which was his pride and joy and still remains his fond remembrance. She slipped something into the political tea of Eddy McGrady and thus deprived the president of about the most devoted loyal and able armor-bearer who ever served a leader—and did for her the only competent work on the labor front for which she ever deserved the slightest credit.

Gave Up Career

Now she has bumped off another honest man who, with many misgivings, gave up a promising career on the urging that he could thus serve his idol—Mr. Roosevelt—and the ideals which he thought they shared in common.

The president knows perfectly well that all this is true. But Muddom is the first experiment with a woman in the cabinet. It flopped. A scientist would call it a day and go on to the next experiment or more if necessary. But there is no science here. There is petticoat.

The boss knows well that the test tubes are all broken, that burning acid has been spilled all over the expensive doilies and that the whole laboratory reeks with the sulphuric odor of putrid eggs. But my idealistic and earnest sister columnist in the White House feels that if Fanny fades it will be a set-back to women in government.

Do It Anyway

This is no knock on ladies ruling. They do it anyway, as witness Mrs. Fanny Wilson's political immortality in spite of the most God-awful record in government. Queens Victoria and Elizabeth were the best monarchs of England, and Catherine advanced Russia most. In this case, at least, we haven't had that luck. But Muddom isn't the only woman in the United States. We have 65,000,000 of them. Many have proved as great an administrative ability as any man that ever walked. Furthermore, as is well known in Washington, there is a corps of faithful inconspicuous women in the permanent Federal organization without whose wise, tactful and experienced guidance, many a stuffed-shirt temporary male political appointee who gets by with credit wouldn't even know his way about.

With Same Snickersee

Mr. Andrews tried to administer the Wages and Hours law in a judicial manner without the odor of the Labor Relations board, of a French tribune of the Terror, or the aspect of a Soviet Russian trial of industrial kulaks. This just didn't suit Muddom Sec. and it didn't please Tommy the Cork. They wanted, as usual, to "hit 'em in the jugular." Elmer was slain with the same snickersnee that disembowled the War Resources Board, wielded by the same hands and for the same reasons. American industry is a barely tolerated institution in their eyes—the kicking boy of the Fourth New Deal.

It is a hell of a way to get the kind of unity and cooperation necessary under the threat of war. It is an even worse way for the president to keep able, loyal and devoted men about him—to sacrifice them to the vengeance and spite of these hatchet men and women of the palace guard. He has tossed many able personal idolators to such wolves. If he ever stood long for a courageous friend against such familiars, I can't recall the case.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

The lethal effect of such powder is decidedly questionable, according to scientists, and what deaths, if any, occurred, are probably attributed to physiological effects plus other poisons that were given for good measure.

Realism

IT is disturbing to note from a recent Gallup poll that an amazingly large number of Americans are obsessed with a fantastic delusion that Hitler may crush England and France and then come over here and nonchalantly take possession of the United States.

Such simple credulity might be amusing did it not constitute a grave danger to our peace and security. The danger is that any such widespread hysteria of fear may warp the collective judgment of our people and prompt unreasoning acts that might lead to our involvement in the European conflict.

Unwarranted apprehension of an imaginary war in the future might be just the thing to push us into a very real war in the present.

It is the kind of thing to make the propagandists who want us to take sides and sit in on the international poker game smack their lips with relish. They know that one of the greatest of all appeals is the appeal to fear.

Grotesque as is this Hitler bugaboo, it would be neither good sportsmanship nor ordinary fair dealing to ridicule those who are afflicted with such Nazi jitters. The germ was implanted with loose talk about "our frontiers in France." The infection was spread by the hysterical vaporing of certain writers whose judgment the public had come to regard as at least well-balanced and free from emotionalism. It is regrettable that of late they have perverted their unquestioned talents to making of Hitler the kind of bogey man that frightened us into hiding our heads in the bed covers when we were children.

Let's not go into any long discussion of the many political, economic and military reasons why Hitler cherishes no such grandoise ambitions and why he couldn't realize them if he did. A few simple facts suffice.

To crush France, he would have to smash the Maginot line. Military experts estimate that this would cost 750,000 lives, if, indeed, it could be done at all because of factors not of a military nature.

Then there stands in the way the might of the British navy. Effective as submarines have been against merchant shipping, they have been unimpressive against warships. They are not adapted to mass attack against a battle fleet. They are furtive raiders—lone wolves of the sea.

All recent experience, moreover, shows conclusively that although the airplane is a valuable military adjunct, if objectives are to be taken and territory occupied the infantry still must do the job.

One needn't be reminded that our navy today is the finest in the world and is getting better every day. Neither does one have to be reminded that the Atlantic ocean is still 3,000 miles across, nor rehearse the lessons of Gallipoli.

Let's keep our shirts on and our powder dry. The danger isn't that Hitler may attack us. It is that emotion may lead us into the pitfall of war that sound judgment would have avoided.

Boomerang Propaganda

AN ASSUMPTION that British officialdom is stupid because it is slow is not invariably safe, even when held by other Britons, as it has been in the matter of releasing war information.

Slow it surely is, as we have reason to know. Meanwhile, the Germans have been very accommodating in providing timely pictures of their feats of arms in Poland, of the irresistible progress of a great mechanized army across a prostrate land, of bombers raining destruction, and tanks and artillery spraying death on every hand. It all testifies to Nazi military might, and is calculated to dazzle and impress. The question remains if, in the long view, this is not poorer propaganda for its sponsors than it is for the Allies.

It portrays in a very graphic way the reason why Britain and France are committed to a war which will exterminate Hitlerism. As long as the rest of Europe remains under the threat of the things revealed and implied in these pictures from Poland, life in its ordinary meaning is impossible, the Allies contend.

The propagandists of London could wish for nothing better to illustrate the point of their case than the material provided the world by the efficient information service of the Nazi war office. Often, the "stupidity" of the Briton in the public service is only seeming; and so it may be here. Why should he interfere now if the foe is offering an eloquent, if unintended, exposition of the case for the Allies?

War Profits Taxes

IN CONNECTION with the discussion in Washington about framing new war profits taxes, congressmen are being reminded by various business men and their organizations that different conditions obtain now than back in 1917-18, and that such taxes, if superimposed, should be carefully laid with that difference in view.

According to a treasury estimate made in 1931, taxes took about seventy per cent of the difference between the profits of the war years and of pre-war years. These taxes began in 1916, a year before we went in, with a rate of twenve and one-half per cent laid on the profits of munition-makers in addition to the regular individual and corporation income levies. In 1917 a real excess profits tax was levied with rates running from twenty to sixty per cent. In that year it brought in almost $1,850,000,000, or more than twice the total treasury receipts from all sources in the preceding year.

In 1918 a war profits tax was levied in addition running from thirty to sixty-five per cent. The sum total of the two taxes, plus a corporation income tax of twelve per cent, was, for the top-notchers, ninety-two per cent of net income. These taxes brought in $3,159,000,000, or about thrice the taxes on corporate incomes for 1939.

What it all amounted to was that the large makers of munitions worked for the army and navy twelve months in the year and for the treasury a little more than eleven.

The difference between the World war period and today lies in the fact that taxes on business and industry then were nothing as compared to what they are now and on which the new taxes would be superimposed.

There should be some curb on war profiteering, particularly in the manufacture of munitions but in general should not be of the strangulation type. Business men are not keen about excessive war profits for several reasons. One is the costly aftermath with enlarged plants, facilities and payrolls left on their hands, which will make for depression. That factor, too, should be weighed in the equation.

When Money Flies

IT USED TO BE that time was on the side of the debtor. Smith in Los Angeles owed Brown in New York $1,000 for a bill of merchandise, terms three per cent discount if paid by a certain date. The date approached and Smith didn't have the money, so he "kited" a check and mailed to Brown. Allowing five days going and the same returning, that gave him ten days grace to raise the money and cover his check before it should get back to his bank in Los Angeles for payment. Distance saved him $30.

But air mail has put a crimp in "kiting," says Nation's Business. Through its use Smith's check would be back in his bank the day after Brown deposited it in a New York bank. The kiter's margin has been reduced from days to hours. Of even more significance is the speed-up in money turnover. Brown can deposit his $1,000 and check against it at least four days sooner than formerly. With money dirt cheap as at present, four days' interest is not much of an item, but that much time gained in buying and paying for merchandise is.

In at least one large Los Angeles branch bank your check will be photographed on movie film before it goes to the airport. If the plane should come to grief and its bank mail be burned these negatives will be developed and the photographs become acceptable evidence for payment by the banks on which the checks are drawn.

Truly, the constant contraction of space and time are making a strange new world.

Appropriate

THE PAPERS of President Woodrow Wilson have been placed for permanent keeping in the Library of Congress, his official biographer, Ray Stannard Baker, having completed his use of them. In giving them to the government for the free use of the public, Mrs. Wilson has with forethought provided for a special custodian to classify and catalog them.

Such disposition of presidential papers is quite appropriate as it will contribute to the convenience of historians as well as scholars of all kind who seek light upon the war and other conditions of the time represented by the documents, as they will be important to others than biographers.

Far better it is to have such papers reposing in a public institution like the Congressional library than in some self-created shrine far from the center of governmental archives.

A Japanese newspaper claims that the United States started and is responsible for the war in Europe. And yet there are some folk who insist the Japs do not have a sense of humor!

It begins to look as though the only thing any of those European belligerents will gain out of this war is more of what they already have too many of—historic battlefields.

We haven't seen the worst of this war. Wait until it is over and all those belligerent statesmen and generals begin turning out books to explain away their mistakes.

Think of the trouble which would be prevented if those tiny, weak little European nations would stop picking on their huge greedy neighbors!

Now that the baseball season is over, this would be a good time for the other seven American league clubs to secede from the Yankees.

The Humar Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

In past decades or centuries, all the men with whom Britain engaged in the diplomatic tierce and riposte would have been passed by the membership committee of the gentleman's club which ran England. That gave the British foreign office both assurance and a dependable technique in empire building. The ground rules were as definite and durable as the cricket rules at Eton and Harrow.

In this pattern of international behaviour, the British gentlemen became an article of export, and international negotiation became a matter of certain ancient proprieties. This being true, I have an idea that much of the confusion and apparent bewilderment of the British high command, in the last ten years, is due to the fact that the Metternichs, the Tallyrands, the von Moltkes, the von Bernhardis have passed, and unpedigreed, uncertified and largely inexperienced power men have risen to take their places.

It would seem quite impossible that Sir Samuel Hoare, of Ye Olde Golden Bottel Bank, dating back to the reign of Charles I, could ever have known a man such as the base-born Adolf Schickelgrueber, or the scowling, ham-fisted Joseph Dshugaskvili, who came to the chancellories under the assumed names of Hitler and Stalin.

Is Embarrassing

That, in itself, is embarrassing. A man couldn't get into a good London club under an assumed name. And then there's the chest-beating blacksmith's son, Benito Mussolini, using his own name, to be sure, but given to behaviour which no responsible house committee would sanction.

One thinks of the old story of Bernhardt's Cleopatra, at the old Odeon theater in the days of Good Queen Vic. A slave reported the loss of a battle and Cleopatra, in a magnificent outburst of lurid rage smashed the furniture, tore up the draperies and pretty nearly wrecked the theater. It was Bernhardt's greatest moment of glorious abandon, and it set the French audience wild. After the tumult ebbed and the theater was hushed and expectant, a grandmotherly little Englishwoman was heard to murmur: "How unlike the home life of our own dear queen."

Contrast Is Given

One gets the contrast between British decorum and a world untutored in the ancient rubric of proper behaviour. It is no wonder that Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, visiting Hitler shortly after Munich, failed in a realistic estimate of Herr Schickelgrueber. He returned and told England:

"On no account must we fall from the height of exultation to which the world was lifted by the Munich peace."

And so it was with Halifax, MacMillan, Chamberlain, Simon, Beaverbrook and all the others of the leaders of British foreign missions to the strange Ammonites and Hittites who behave in an unseemly manner, but who, they hoped to the last, would be all right if you met them half way.

It is rare that one not a public school man has ever penetrated into the de factor government, or inner cabinet, of about thirty men who rule England. The beloved Mr. Chips has helped us get this straight, over here, the public school of England being just the reverse of ours—a school for the sons of gentlemen only.

From the Realities

This has given British statesmanship high character and culture, and it has sluiced good brains into the government, but it has isolated their leaders from certain important realities and it has concealed from them many of the political facts of life, and certainly any politician is handicapped in this day and age if he knows and understands only nice people.

We intend to restrain ourselves from smug citations of our own superiority and well-being as against Europe's tragedy, but I cannot help noting that our political way of life equips us for more realism. I'm thinking of a Senate committee I once attended, presided over by the blue-blooded and grammatical old Senator Lodge. A Missouri Senator was tossing in solecisms, and a Kansas Senator had soup on his vest. In this flux and free-for-all the homespun Senators learned to know and respect the Back Bay Brahmin and vice versa. More of that kind of milling would have done the British statesmen a lot of good in this last critical decade. — Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BLUEBEARD'S SEVENTH WIFE

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Oct. 10 — President Roosevelt seems likely, at this time, to get approximately the neutrality measure he has asked for. (Though it is possible the debate, if it should be prolonged, might pass into a new phase; that the whole subject of neutrality might be approached from a standpoint new at this time but very old — the broad standpoint of long accepted international law.)

Mark Sullivan

If Mr. Roosevelt gets the measure he has asked for, he will get it in part by the votes of senators who, on personal grounds and public grounds, have reason to oppose him. He will get it by the votes of Democratic senators he personally tried to "purge," such as George, of Georgia, and Smith, of South Carolina; and by the votes of other Democratic senators whom Mr. Roosevelt's intimates tried to purge, such as Mr. Gillette, of Iowa. Mr. Roosevelt will get his measure by the votes of yet other Democratic Senators whom some of Mr. Roosevelt's radical followers have held up to public scorn as "Tories," such as Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia; and Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, who was the choice of most of the Democratic senators for floor leader, but who was defeated because Mr. Roosevelt put his influence behind Senator Barkley, of Kentucky. And Mr. Roosevelt will get his measure in part by the votes of some Republican senators who, disregarding partisanship, believe that in the matter of neutrality Mr. Roosevelt's proposal is better than the existing law.

Owes Debt to Congress

In this situation Mr. Roosevelt owes a debt of tolerance to Congress. He does not seem to pay it when he shows reluctance to let Congress function beyond a limit he suggests, or even to have Congress remain in Washington indefinitely. Mr. Roosevelt has made it plain that he prefers Congress, in this special session, should act on the neutrality measure and nothing else.

In this attitude Mr. Roosevelt has gone to considerable length. Recently, in expanding the army and navy, the president had occasion to make expenditures for buildings beyond the amount provided in the regular appropriation measures passed in the regular session of Congress. As a way of meeting this difficulty, Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would make the necessary expenditures anyhow, relying upon Congress to take care of the deficiency when it meets in regular session in January. The amount of money involved is slight; as a going beyond authority, the incident is not important. But members of Congress wonder why the pesident shrould not conform to rule by simply asking the present special session of Congress to make the necessary appropriation—it would consume very little time.

Preference Apparent

If these were a mere matter of expediting the neutrality measure, of avoiding interference with the neutrality debate by introduction of any other matter, Congress would understand. But it is apparent Mr. Roosevelt's preference is that this special session of Congress should deal with the Neutrality and then go home, until the regular session in January.

This position of Mr. Roosevelt, rather than speeding the neutrality measure, may impede it. Some of the leadership of Congress thinks that Congress ought to be in session more or less continuously throughout the period of emergency created by the war in Europe. Some of the time consumed in acting upon the neutrality measure will be merely a way of keeping Congress in Washington.

Also, this attitude of Mr. Roosevelt toward Congress results in his getting smaller powers than he otherwise might. The pending neutrality measure does not give the president as much power or discretion as many think that a president should have, at a time when the country faces the unpredictable day-to-day problems arising out of war abroad.

Wary of Discretion

In the belief of many, the really wise way to achieve neutrality, and to handle the problems arising from war abroad, would be to abandon completely the artificial and strained so-neutrality bill, and go back to the basis we had under a score of presidents preceding Mr. Roosevelt, for a century and a quarter preceding 1935, the basis of international law. But when this was proposed, responsible Democratic leaders said that not ten senators would vote for it. The senators would not vote for it because they are hesitant to give great power and discretion to the president.

The present president and the present Congress must get along together for nearly a year and a quarter until January 1941. The present session, special, will last as long as it lasts—that is, until the neutrality measure is disposed of. Thereafter, for six-weeks or whatnot, there will be no Congress in session. In January the regular session will begin. This regular session has no statutory limit—it could go for a full year, until January 1941. In practice, however, this session would be likely to end about July first. For 1940 is a major political year, with nominations and elections of a president, the whole membership of the House, and a third of the Senate. As a rule Congress tries to wind up its work simultaneously with the national conventions in June or July. This practice if followed next year would result in no session of Congress, unless specially called, between about July 1st and January 1st. It hardly seems probable that conditions next year will permit so long a recess.

The Will to Peace

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

In considering the question of neutrality legislation, it is well to bear in mind that we cannot keep out of war by the mere automatic functioning of a law. The Wall Street Journal puts it succinctly in this passage:

"But it must be repeated and never forgotten that no statute can keep a war away from our shores if we as a people have not the incorruptible will to stay out of it."

That thought cannot be overstressed. There is a tendency, we suspect, to place too much reliance in legislation; to feel that when we have drafted a satisfactory neutrality law, we become thereby safely insulated against war. That is a dangerous state of mind.

The best a neutrality law and a national policy can do is to lessen the likelihood of an incident developing which could lead to war. But if we are warlike in our thoughts and our expressions; if we let our sympathies or prejudices or fears run away with our common sense, we will awaken some day to find the country in the middle of this mess, law or no law.

We Can Be Self-Supporting

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

There is very little with which Mother Nature has blessed other parts of the earth that cannot be reproduced in Uncle Sam's domain. For example:

Thirty years ago there was one American date for every million imported. Today, in the Coachelle valley in California, one date is raised for every dozen brought from overseas. Growers are looking forward to the time when practically all of the 70,000,000 pounds consumed by Americans will be raised within our borders.

The valleys of Southern California and Arizona are planted with something like a quarter of a million date palms. The number is being increased rapidly.

So it is with other products of the soil. We have the conditions for their propagation in large degree, under climate conditions existing from the Canadian border to the tip of Florida and the unusual conditions existing in the Southwest. We can become a self-supporting people. All the more reason why we should not involve ourselves in the warfare of Old World nations.

Morning Motto

There is no such thing as an inevitable war. If war comes it will be from failure of human wisdom.—BONAR LAW

On the Record

By John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Chairman

The challenge presented to our party can be met only by political action. It is our solemn obligation to meet that challenge and not to dodge it by seeking refuge in an adjournment of politics at a time when our domestic problems are as critical as our foreign relations.

And we must meet that challenge soon. The party national conventions are less than a year off. In November of next year the people must choose a President of the United States. If there ever was a time when the politics of principles should not be adjourned it is now and in the months preceding that vitally important undertaking.

The real need today is for more, and not less, political alertness. It would be fatal for the nation if we permitted our preoccupation with the affairs of Europe to blind us to the state of affairs at home. The danger is all the greater since the war itself already is serving to obscure and to distort the domestic picture.

Good Man Lost in Andrews Ousting

HUGH JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 10.—Where's Elmer? Elmer is out on his ear. But it isn't the American Legion's Lost Battalion of Elmers. It is Elmer Andrews, administrator of the third egg of the old Blue Eagle—the Wages and Hours act.

Is Elmer out because he was incompetent, disloyal or insubordinate? Oh no, his record in public and private service is in the very top flight. Elmer is out because he tried conscientiously to administer the law he was sworn to enforce—because he would not kow-tow like a coward to the sub-service machinations of the palace janissariat who wanted to pervert it. Elmer is a victim of the lethal syrup of our modern political Lucretia Borgia, Muddom Perkins.

Similar tactics on her part first undermined and then destroyed the president's NRA—which was his pride and joy and still remains his fond remembrance. She slipped something into the political tea of Eddy McGrady and thus deprived the president of about the most devoted loyal and able armor-bearer who ever served a leader—and did for her the only competent work on the labor front for which she ever deserved the slightest credit.

Gave Up Career

Now she has bumped off another honest man who, with many misgivings, gave up a promising career on the urging that he could thus serve his idol—Mr. Roosevelt—and the ideals which he thought they shared in common.

The president knows perfectly well that all this is true. But Muddom is the first experiment with a woman in the cabinet. It flopped. A scientist would call it a day and go on to the next experiment or more if necessary. But there is no science here. There is petticoat.

The boss knows well that the test tubes are all broken, that burning acid has been spilled all over the expensive doilies and that the whole laboratory reeks with the sulphuric odor of putrid eggs. But my idealistic and earnest sister columnist in the White House feels that if Fanny fades it will be a set-back to women in government.

Do It Anyway

This is no knock on ladies ruling. They do it anyway, as witness Mrs. Fanny Wilson's political immortality in spite of the most God-awful record in government. Queens Victoria and Elizabeth were the best monarchs of England, and Catherine advanced Russia most. In this case, at least, we haven't had that luck. But Muddom isn't the only woman in the United States. We have 65,000,000 of them. Many have proved as great an administrative ability as any man that ever walked. Furthermore, as is well known in Washington, there is a corps of faithful inconspicuous women in the permanent Federal organization without whose wise, tactful and experienced guidance, many a stuffed-shirt temporary male political appointee who gets by with credit wouldn't even know his way about.

With Same Snickersee

Mr. Andrews tried to administer the Wages and Hours law in a judicial manner without the odor of the Labor Relations board, of a French tribune of the Terror, or the aspect of a Soviet Russian trial of industrial kulaks. This just didn't suit Muddom Sec. and it didn't please Tommy the Cork. They wanted, as usual, to "hit 'em in the jugular." Elmer was slain with the same snickersnee that disembowled the War Resources Board, wielded by the same hands and for the same reasons. American industry is a barely tolerated institution in their eyes—the kicking boy of the Fourth New Deal.

It is a hell of a way to get the kind of unity and cooperation necessary under the threat of war. It is an even worse way for the president to keep able, loyal and devoted men about him—to sacrifice them to the vengeance and spite of their hatchet men and women of the palace guard. He has tossed many able personal idolators to such wolves. If he ever stood long for a courageous friend against such familiars, I can't recall the case.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Various nobles, during the middle ages, ground diamonds to powder and used them to poison their enemies. The lethal effect of such a powder is decidedly questionable according to scientists, and what deaths, if any, occurred, are probably attributed to physiological effects plus other poisons that were given for good measure.

B&O Loadings Off Slightly

Carloadings for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad dropped slightly last week compared to the preceding week but are still well ahead of last year's total, it was announced yesterday.

Carloadings on the B. and O. for the week ending Oct. 7 totaled 55,417, including 36,173 cars loaded on line and 19,244 received from connections.

This was an increase of 10,944 loads over the corresponding week of last year when the total was 44,473, comprising 28,178 cars loaded on line and 16,295 received from connections.

For the previous week of this year (the weeks ending Sept. 30), total loads were 55,987 consisting of 36,832 cars loaded on line and 19,155 received from connections.

During the corresponding week of the year, 1930, the total carloadings were 66,373, of which 43,130 cars were loaded on line and 23,243 received from connections.

engulfed Russian-occupied Poland in a wave of applied Communism and infiltrated Soviet influence into the Balkans and Turkey; but for what ultimate purpose none can yet foresee.

Informed students of the war do not see much likelihood that Russia will enter the conflict on either side, at least while any doubt remains as to which will be the winner.

Whatever Russia does to carry forward her march down the Baltic on Germany's sea flank, or to wring from Turkey concessions designed to make the Black Sea a virtual Russian lake, she is hardly likely to invite any situation in which Germany could concentrate the full force of the Reich's military power against her.

Russia May Not Fight

The German sweep through Poland taught military experts a grim lesson as to what highly mechanized forces can do in open warfare. Russia must have little doubt what might happen to her westward progress against a Germany released from war tension with the Allies. Because of that, there is a disposition still to reckon on Russia as arming herself for a tactical battle at the ultimate European peace table, rather than for entry into the war at any time as a belligerent.

For all of these reasons, the Moscow conversations and the unrest they have occasioned in Baltic states and Scandinavia created more interest than did Premier Daladier's rejection of Hitler peace overtures yesterday. That Prime Minister Chamberlain will throw all the weight of Britain behind his French colleague when he addresses Parliament later in the week goes without saying.

War Seems Certain

If there is any loophole for peace still open after the Daladier speech, it is difficult to detect it. Yet there is increasing pressure in England for a new and explicit statement by Chamberlain of Allied war aims.

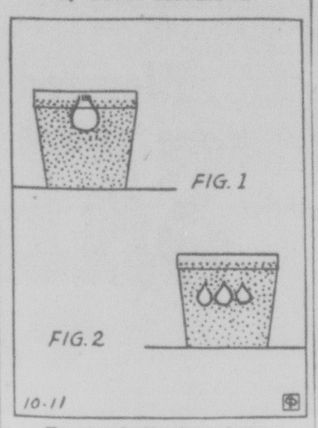

It is probable that these aims contemplate the defeat of Germany, but not her destruction as a bulwark against the advance of Communism westward from Russia. However, it might be difficult for Chamberlain to make such a statement now. An Allied victory in an important engagement might pave the way for it, but that prospect is remote as yet.

Toledo, O., Oct. 10 (AP)—The Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., announced today that net profits for nine months ending Sept. 30 amounted to $3,902,516.10, equivalent to $1.56 a share, as compared with profits of $428,705.72 or 17 cents a share in the corresponding 1938 period.

Forcing bulbs for winter bloom

Nothing can brighten up a living room more during the dreary days of winter than a display of potted crocus, tulups, hyacinths or daffodils.

To get best results, however, the bulbs must be properly potted. Hyacinths or narcissus bulbs when potted should have their tips just above the soil line in the pot, as shown in Figure 1 of today's Garden-Graph. The tips of tulip bulbs, however, should be one-half inch below the soil surface, as shown in Figure 2.

The soil in the flower pot should be leveled off from 3-4 to 1 inch below the rim of the pot, to allow for water.

these neutrality provisions should be discarded in favor of the other, he insisted. "We should have both."

The speaker also hit at the proposal for a 90-credit, urging, instead, that it be "cash on the barrel-head."

Can't Eat Cake and Keep It

He predicted that the President's credit proposal "won't get to first base."

Mr. Libby also considered the position of those who want this country to stay out of war and yet at the same time want to stop Hitler.

Those who hold such a view are "fooling themselves," he declared. "We can't do both. We must choose between the two ideas, and I think America most wants to stay out of war."

He quoted Lindbergh's statement that "munitions alone will not be enough.

"We cannot count on victory merely by shipping abroad several thousand airplanes and cannon. We are likely to lose a million men, possibly several million—the best of American youth."

Save Democracy at Home

He also stressed the noted aviator's contention that "if we enter fighting for democracy abroad, we may end by losing it at home."

All Isms Wear Out

Turning to the question of how Hitler may be stopped without war, he pointed out that "every dictator passes and all 'isms' wear out."

He suggested, too, that removal of the cause of Hitler's rise to power might eventually prove the solution.

"Hitler is the mouth-piece of a suffering German people," he said, declaring that he brought order out of chaos and a measure of security.

He emphasized also the fact that the Polish grab is probably Hitler's last territorial demand, with the exception of colonies, concerning which he has indicated a willingness to negotiate.

German Aims About Met

"The German government does not have unlimited ambition," he stated, adding that it has just about reached its limit now.

He urged an "acceptance of the inevitable," suggesting that it be left to time to ameliorate certain unfortunate conditions.

"There is no injustice comparable to a war to the bitter end," he asserted.

Members of the audience fired questions at Mr. Libby at the close of his address, and the vast majority seemed to agree with his stand.

The Rev. W. J. Hamilton, pastor of the Living Stone Church of the Brethren, presided and introduced the speaker.

After West passed this, North ran 12 consecutive tricks and berated his partner for not helping toward the slam.

The opponents had really scared North and South out of their birthright. North was probably most to blame. proposal was a test of sentiment regarding repeal of the embargo. Saying that some of those who voted against the New Hampshire Senator's motion were committed to vote against lifting the embargo, he went ahead with plans to speak against repeal on the Senate floor.

Many foes of repeal, who contend that lifting of the embargo would help Great Britain and France and probably involve this country in the war, had made plain in advance of the vote that they thought it the wrong time for Tobey to make his motion. They contended that they would gain votes as the debate continued and reaction from the country reached senatorial ears. Most of those publicly committed to preserving the embargo voted with the senator, however, when he insisted upon raising the issue at once.

Clark for Separate Vote

Senator Clark disclosed after the ballot that he would propose at a later date that the administration bill be sent back to the Foreign Relations Committee with instructions to bring it before the Senate again forthwith, minus the embargo repeal provision. He said this would involve no delay whatever, since Chairman Pittman of the committee could carry out the instructions without leaving the Senate floor.

One of the sixty-five votes cast with the administration forces question was that of Former Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky, who had been sworn in as a senator less than half hour previously.

Chandler, whom Governor Keene Johnson of Kentucky appointed to succeed the late Senator M. M. Logan a short time after Chandler had resigned as governor, opposed the administration's Senate leader Senator Barkley of Kentucky, in last year's primary campaign. But he arrived in the capital today with the statement that he thought President Roosevelt wanted to keep the country out of war and that he would do his best to help him realize that desire.

Barkley today escorted Chandler when he walked up the Senate aisle to be sworn in.

"No Experiments for Me When My Child CATCHES COLD!"

NOTICE TO MOTHERS...Today 3 out of 5 mothers—knowing how foolish it is to experiment or constantly dose delicate stomachs—use this home-approved external poultice-vapor treatment to relieve distress of colds.

WHEN a cold makes your child feel miserable, all stuffed up—causes muscular soreness or tightness, irritation in the upper bronchial tubes or spasms of coughing—let the experience of other mothers help you to relieve the distress.

Here's what you do: At bedtime, rub the child's throat, chest and back with Vicks VapoRub. And see what morning brings!

ACTS 2 WAYS AT ONCE... Almost immediately VapoRub starts stimulating like a good old-fashioned poultice. And, at the same time, pleasing—helpful—medicinal vapors are released by body heat and breathed direct into the cold-irritated air passages.

Then for hours this poultice-vapor action continues. It invites refreshing sleep. And when you see how it relieves distress you will understand why Vicks VapoRub is a family standby in 3 out of 5 homes. WHY TAKE NEEDLESS CHANCES!

Delicacy is Last Word in Make-up

NAN GREY . . . follows the new trend for delicacy in make-up.

* * * * * *

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH FASHIONS going fluffy in a big way, the mask-like, porcelain complexion is on its way toward the realm of forgotten beauty whimsies. New tactics call for make-up that has delicacy. If a foundation cosmetic is used, it must be patted into the flesh so that it disappears; the powder must be as light as the fluff on a butterfly's wings.

To condition the complexion for the best possible effects, use soap and warm water at night, followed by a gentle creaming. Use cold water and an astringent in the morning; have an ice rub before freshening up for dinner. All sorts of beauty sorrows are the price we pay for neglecting the facial premises—blackheads, acne, crinkles and creases, large pores. Do your pulchritude chores daily, rain or shine, no matter if the roof caves in or the chimney falls down.

Drink plenty of water, take fruit juices. Avoid fried foods, an excess of sweets and pastries. The daily bath does wonders for the complexion, stimulating the functions of the skin all over the body so the delicate glands of the face haven't so much work to do.

Take time by the cowlick, and the oncoming years will find you with a fresh, youthful complexion. Fight skin blemishes before you get them.

When the complexion still carries remnants of tan, it sometimes happens that a mauve or lavender powder can be applied with gratifying results. It is particularly effective for evening use, giving a transparent look to the skin when the bright lights are on.

Old-fashioned flesh tints are returning. They mean that you can dispense with factory blushes. Fluff them on lightly with the lamb's-wool pad, then tap the flesh with the finger-tips. Use the small brush on eyebrows and along the forward hair line, putting a little brilliantine on the bristles of the brush to provide a pleasing glitter.

Polish Prisoners All Ask for Work

Geneva, Oct. 10 (AP) — Dr. Marcel Junod, international Red Cross official visitor to German prison camps, said in a report released here tonight that all Polish prisoners in three camps he inspected had asked for work.

Dr. Junod added that many prisoners already had been released for work on farms in Germany.

The first camp visited, Dr. Junod said, was Itzhehoe, thirty-five miles from Hamburg, where he said he found 900 Polish officers, 200 orderlies, two British and two French aviators.

The second was at Bromberg, with 32 officers, 600 soldiers, and 2,500 civilians, all Polish. The third was at Harmenstein, near Neustettin, with 1,500 Polish prisoners of various ranks.

Dr. Junod said the German Red Cross and German military authorities cooperated fully during his visits.

Rep. C. D. Sullivan Again Heads Tammany

New York, Oct. 10 (AP) — Rep. Christopher D. Sullivan, long an opponent of the local Roosevelt wing of the Democratic party, last night was re-elected leader of Tammany hall by its executive committee.

Under his administration the hall in 1937 had suffered the most disastrous defeat in its long career—the re-election of the Fusionist Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and the election of a Republican district attorney of Manhattan, Thomas E. Dewey.

Ten new district leaders were chosen.

Among them were Rep. James H. Fay, whose 1938 Democratic primary defeat of Rep. John J. O'Connor was the only White House "purge" victory, and Arthur J. W. Hilly, successor to James J. Hines, who is under sentence for conspiracy in the policy racket.

Negress Sentenced To Be Executed

Frederick, Md., Oct. 10 (AP)—Martha Rose, 38-year-old Burkittsville negress who served five years for manslaughter, was sentenced yesterday to be hanged for the axe murder of her husband, Daniel V. Rose.

The sentence was pronounced by Chief Judge Edward S. Delaplaine of the circuit court, with Associate Judges Arthur D. Willard and Charles W. Woodward concurring.

Judge Delaplaine described the killing as "a clear case of willful and deliberate murder."

Mrs. Rose was paroled in 1938 after serving five years of a seven-year term for manslaughter in connection with the axe slaying of Charles Lucas, a negro.

U-boat fleet—the wolves of the sea

Crew leaves a torpedoed ship

A mad scramble for safety

Remembering its highly successful submarine campaign during the World war which almost brought England to her knees, Germany once more is conducting a vigorous U-boat warfare against Allied shipping. Above are shown a fleet of German submarines, passengers and crew of a ship, torpedoed during the World war, getting into a lifeboat, and a boatload of sailors quitting their sinking ship — also a scene from the World war. Arrow points to one sailor, left behind, hanging from the stern of torpedoed vessel.

A body of dark eyed tropical beauties in colorful costumes offer a variety of dances ranging all the way from the current dance craze, "South American Sway," to the latest in fast stepping taps.

Bud Glenn and his rhumba band bring an assortmeit of South American favorite melodies interspersed with the latest in fox trots played in the approved swing style. Their soft tones with only the occasional blare of brass forms a restful contrast to the usual nerve jangling fare offered by a typical brass band.

Slave Story Features Glamorous Polynesian

Mamo Clark was practically snatched from her school room classes to portray Clark Gable's sweetheart in "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Her performance in that film won the actress a contract, but definitely established her as a native girl "type".

So it was only natural that she should be selected to play the dark-eyed native beauty who charms Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in Universal's adventure drama "Mutiny on the Blackhawk."

The picture starts tomorrow at the Liberty Theater with Noah Beery, Constance Moore, Mala, Princess Luana, Thurston Hall and Richard Lane in supporting roles.

Although Mamo is a native Hawaiian and was born in Honolulu, she has golden brown skin that is lighter than most shades of the popular Hollywood tan.

Even though Miss Clark speaks English and once studied law at the University of Southern California, directors have been reluctant to cast her as anything but a south seas island girl. After her hit performance in "Mutiny on the Bounty," she was featured in "Hurricane" and "Hawaii Calls."

"Naughty But Nice" Opens Today at Garden

Now that Ann Sheridan has been elected America's "oomph girl," statisticians have discovered that she has the ideal figure for redheads.

Yes, indeed. There's an ideal blonde figure. And an ideal brunette figure. And of course the red-heads have figures, too.

The "ideal" standard is arrived at by a composite of all the dimensions of glamour girls of various types. In the event that you're interested in finding out who might have such data, it's Milo Anderson, Warner Bros., costume designer. He studies girls' figures. It's part of his work, and believe it or not, he's very objective and scientific about it all.

Miss Sheridan of the "oomph" fame is 118 in weight, five feet, five inches tall. She has a 26-inch waist, 36-inch hips, and a 36-inch bust. That's right on the nose — or whatever it should be right on — for the ideal red-headed figure.

Another characteristic of the typical film hed-head — and this, believe it or not, is also part of Anderson's statistical dope — is the fact that they have husky throaty, velvety voices of rather low register. So, as you might expect, Ann has just that sort of voice. It was so effective — and some folk might say suggestive — that in "Naughty but Nice," her latest Warner Bros. picture, scheduled to open today at the Garden, in which she was originally scheduled to sing only two songs, she sings four.

Rita Hayworth, who appears at the Garden Theater in support of Warren William and Ida Lupino in Columbia's "The Lone Wolf Spy Hunt", was a world-famous Spanish dancer before she turned to motion picture work.

Germany Repeats World War Tactics with Submarine Attacks

U-boat fleet—the wolves of the sea

A mad scramble for safety

Remembering its highly successful submarine campaign during the World war which almost brought England to her knees, Germany once more is conducting a vigorous U-boat warfare against Allied shipping. Above are shown a fleet of German submarines, passengers and crew of a ship, torpedoed during the World war, getting into a lifeboat, and a boatload of sailors quitting their sinking ship — also a scene from the World war. Arrow points to one sailor, left behind, hanging from the stern of torpedoed vessel.

Speeches by Hitler and Daladier Quicken Pulse of Stock Market

But Gains of Three Points Are Reduced by Profit-Taking

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—The stock market's war pulse quickened today following belligerent speeches by Germany's Hitler and France's Daladies, but gains running to three points at the best were substantially reduced or cancelled at the close.

There was selling and buying flurries and prices hit the top in the last hour in the wake of the French premier's address. Profit taking, however, reached leaders just before the finish.

The Associated Press Average of sixty stocks retained a net advance of .4 of a point at 52.2. Transfers of 953,500 shares compared with 617,942 the day before.

News from the domestic industrial front continued cheering market-wise. U. S. Steel announced its September shipments, largest in two years. Estimates of freight loadings for the week ended Oct. 7, indicated the total may have touched a peak for any week since the fall of 1930.

Bethlehem and U. S. Steel, up more than two at one time, finished with fractional gains.

Allied Chemicad held an advance of 3 1-2 and lesser improvement was shown by Douglas Aircraft, Eastern Airlines, American Smelting, Lee Tire, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Westinghouse, Phelps Dodge, American Can, du Pont and Johns-Manville.

Marked up fractions to more than a point in the curb were Jones & Laughlin, Lockheed, American Cynamid "B" and Creole Petroleum.

"Wuthering Heights" And "Six Gun Trail" Showing at Embassy

In support of Miss Oberon and Olivier, Mr. Goldwyn chose a handpicked cast which includes David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson, Donald Crisp, Hugh Williams and Miles Mander. In assigning the directorial task on this production to William Wyler, Mr. Goldwyn entrusted his film to a man whose enviable reputation rests on sich outstanding screen successes as "These Three," "Dodsworth," "Dead End" and "Jezebel."

The story of "Wuthering Heights" unfolds on the wild and desolate moors at Yorkshire. It is a tale of a high-spirited, quick-tempered, beautiful girl, who is loved madly by two men — one, half-gypsy and half-gentleman, the other rich and well born. Merle Oberon, playing Cathy, is desperately in love with Laurence Olivier, playing Heathcliff. But the glittering wealth and esteemed social position of Edgar Linton, portrayed by David Niven, leads the girl into an unhappy romance. The strange three-cornered love story is told with dramatic impact, sweeping romance and in terms of stark human emotions, mysteriously influenced by the desolate moors.

The second feature will be the western drama starring Tim McCoy, "Six Gun Trail" with all star western cast.

"Good Girls Go To Paris" Ends Run Today At Maryland

Ginger As Fixer in "Fifth Avenue Girl"

The virtual miracles worked by a penniless young lady in straightening out the marital and domestic dilemmas of a too-rich family make for absorbing drama and amusing comedy in "Fifth Avenue Girl," starring Ginger Rogers. Walter Connolly, Verree Teasdale, James Ellison, Tim Holt, Kathryn Adams and Franklin Pangborn have the principal roles in this RKO Radio film now showing at the Liberty.

Broke, Miss Rogers as a working girl accepts an unusual proposition from a kindly, unhappy millionaire. Her duties are to move into his own mansion as a companion, and by arousing the jealousy of his mercenary wife and two grown children, contrive to make them take new interest in him other than as a provider of luxury. The amusing result is said to strike a new high in comedy romances.

"Golden Boy" Romantic Film

The thrilling, tender story of youthful dreams . . . triumphant against a mighty city's heartbreak! The sensitive story of a boy's tragic conflict . . . and a girl's joyous love! The mighty story of romance . . . . in the life of a musician who became a prize-ring killer!

It's "Golden Boy," the internationally - famous stage success by Cliff Odets, brought to the Maryland Theater screen tomorrow by Columbia Pictures. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian and starring Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou and William Holden, the stirring new drama which has been hailed as one of the most gripping stories of raging conflict and warm romance ever captured by the camera!

Holden, in the title role, was chosen for the part after a year-long, nation - wide search in which more than 3,000 candidates were interviewed and screen-tested. That the carefulness with which Columbia sought a screen newcomer and potential star is justified has been amply proven by advance reports.

Others in the stellar cast are Joseph Calleia, Sam Levene, Lee Cobb, Edward Brophy, William Strauss, Frank Jenks, Beatrice Blinn, Don Beddoe and Harry Tyler.

"Here I Am a Stranger" Features Brenda Joyce

Zanuck's latest discovery, who made such a decisive hit in his production of the Louis Bromfield best-seller "The Rains Came," and is currently featured in

Speeches by Hitler and Daladier Quicken Pulse of Stock Market

But Gains of Three Points Are Reduced by Profit-Taking

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—The stock market's war pulse quickened today following belligerent speeches by Germany's Hitler and France's Daladies, but gains running to three points at the best were substantially reduced or cancelled at the close.

There was selling and buying flurries and prices hit the top in the last hour in the wake of the French premier's address. Profit taking, however, reached leaders just before the finish.

The Associated Press Average of sixty stocks retained a net advance of .4 of a point at 52.2. Transfers of 953,500 shares compared with 617,942 the day before.

News from the domestic industrial front continued cheering market-wise. U. S. Steel announced its September shipments, largest in two years. Estimates of freight loadings for the week ended Oct. 7, indicated the total may have touched a peak for any week since the fall of 1930.

Bethlehem and U. S. Steel, up more than two at one time, finished with fractional gains.

Allied Chemicad held an advance of 3 1-2 and lesser improvement was shown by Douglas Aircraft, Eastern Airlines, American Smelting, Lee Tire, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Westinghouse, Phelps Dodge, American Can, du Pont and Johns-Manville.

Marked up fractions to more than a point in the curb were Jones & Laughlin, Lockheed, American Cynamid "B" and Creole Petroleum.

"Wuthering Heights" And "Six Gun Trail" Showing at Embassy

In support of Miss Oberon and Olivier, Mr. Goldwyn chose a handpicked cast which includes David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson, Donald Crisp, Hugh Williams and Miles Mander. In assigning the directorial task on this production to William Wyler, Mr. Goldwyn entrusted his film to a man whose enviable reputation rests on sich outstanding screen successes as "These Three," "Dodsworth," "Dead End" and "Jezebel."

The story of "Wuthering Heights" unfolds on the wild and desolate moors at Yorkshire. It is a tale of a high-spirited, quick-tempered, beautiful girl, who is loved madly by two men — one, half-gypsy and half-gentleman, the other rich and well born. Merle Oberon, playing Cathy, is desperately in love with Laurence Olivier, playing Heathcliff. But the glittering wealth and esteemed social position of Edgar Linton, portrayed by David Niven, leads the girl into an unhappy romance. The strange three-cornered love story is told with dramatic impact, sweeping romance and in terms of stark human emotions, mysteriously influenced by the desolate moors.

"Good Girls Go To Paris" Ends Run Today At Maryland

Ginger As Fixer in "Fifth Avenue Girl"

The virtual miracles worked by a penniless young lady in straightening out the marital and domestic dilemmas of a too-rich family make for absorbing drama and amusing comedy in "Fifth Avenue Girl," starring Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, Verree Teasdale, James Ellison, Tim Holt, Kathryn Adams and Franklin Pangborn have the principal roles in this RKO Radio film now showing at the Liberty.

Broke, Miss Rogers as a working girl accepts an unusual proposition from a kindly, unhappy millionaire. Her duties are to move into his own mansion as a companion, and by arousing the jealousy of his mercenary wife and two grown children, contrive to make them take new interest in him other than as a provider of luxury. The amusing result is said to strike a new high in comedy romances.

"Golden Boy" Romantic Film

The thrilling, tender story of youthful dreams . . . triumphant against a mighty city's heartbreak! The sensitive story of a boy's tragic conflict. . . . and a girl's joyous love! The mighty story of romance . . . . in the life of a musician who became a prize-ring killer!

It's "Golden Boy," the internationally - famous stage success by Cliff Odets, brought to the Maryland Theater screen tomorrow by Columbia Pictures. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian and starring Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou and William Holden, the stirring new drama which has been hailed as one of the most gripping stories of raging conflict and warm romance ever captured by the camera!

Holden, in the title role, was chosen for the part after a year-long, nation - wide search in which more than 3,000 candidates were interviewed and screen-tested. That the carefulness with which Columbia sought a screen newcomer and potential star is justified has been amply proven by advance reports.

Others in the stellar cast are Joseph Calleia, Sam Levene, Lee Cobb, Edward Brophy, William Strauss, Frank Jenks, Beatrice Blinn, Don Beddoe and Harry Tyler.

COMING TO STRAND

Don Solay and Margot, dancing stars with the "Flying Down To Rio" revue showing Friday only at the Strand theater.

"Here I Am a Stranger" Features Brenda Joyce

The strangest initiation into pictures ever accorded a beautiful young girl slated for stardom, is being given Brenda Joyce, starmaker Darryl F. Zanuck's latest discovery, who made such a decisive hit in his production of the Louis Bromfield best-seller "The Rains Came," and is currently featured in support of Richard Greene in his first starring vehicle, "Here I Am A Stranger," the 20th Century-Fox picture, which shows today and tomorrow at the Strand Theater.

Usually, the glamorizing process begins the moment a promising young beauty is signed, and all the resources of the studio are put to work to enhance her natural beauty on the screen. But in the case of Brenda Joyce, just the opposite course was taken.

The producer is making every effort to establish her in her initial screen appearances as her natural, winsome, vivacious self and to keep her from becoming a conventional Hollywood glamor girl.

Accordingly, the protracted session with the wardrobe and makeup wizards to which a newcomer is usually treated, was foregone in Brenda's case, and no effort was made to keep her flawlessly groomed and coiffed.

As a matter of fact, both her first and second screen roles play up her nautral beauty rather than studied glamor. For her role of Fern Simon in "The Rains Came", she went through earthquake, flood and fire—none of which is exactly conducive to making a girl look her best. And in "Here I Am A Stranger," she is cast as a college hoyden who prefers overalls to frilly gowns.

"Flying Down to Rio" On Strand Stage Friday

In accordance with an established policy of playing the best available stage attractions the Strand Theater announces the engagement of "Flying Down to Rio," stage revue featuring the Lovely Armida for one day only, Friday, October 13.

Advised that the show was open one day only enroute from the Palace Theater in Columbus, Ohio to play Fays Theater in Philadelphia Manager Carl Sherred lost no time in booking the attraction.

Armida, fiery little Spanish entertained heads a cast of thirty-five singing dancing comedy stars. She has made a number of pictures the majority of which were Spanish versions for use abroad and in South America. American theater goers will remember her mainly for her work in shorts, particularly the colorful presentation of La Cucaracha which was released by Radio Keith Orpheum.

In the present show "Flying Down to Rio" she offers a series of numbers in the swing style made popular by Isa Miranda in the the New York production, "Streets of Paris."

Others in the cast include Don

Shadow Over Hill House

By ELLIOTT FILLION

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

Mrs. Peake, proprietor of Hill House, New England summer resort, is found murdered by the "spite fence" erected near her property by her estranged sister, Miss Ivy Newcomb. Previous to the murder the guests had been concerned about the poisoning of one of their number, Mrs. Rutherford, who recovers; strange sounds of a prowler on the property, and the ransacking of one of the rooms. Those at Hill House besides Dr. Neal and Josie Peake, children of the dead woman, are Sally Gordon, spending her first vacation there; her close friends, Rhoda and her fiance Duncan; Dr. Paul and Pauline Rutherford, children of Mrs. Rutherford; Coral Easton, Bruce Orton and Joseph Barry. Josie is friendly with Alan Murray who lives at Miss Ivy's, and that infuriates her brother, Neal. He likes Coral Easton, for whom Josie has no use.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

THE SOUND of those motor cars was what I had been waiting for. I went to the door and threw it open as racing figures loomed out of the fog. Some were in uniform, some not. One halted the others with a gesture and, alone, came to the door. His face was stern, his voice abrupt:

"Chief of Police Forrest. You sent for me?"

"Yes. This way, please." I could be as curt as this big man in uniform. Yet under his crispness I sensed a trace of gentleness.

Without stopping to get my sweater, which I had put to dry before the fire, I led the way across the lawn, around the bridal wreath bush at the beginning of the shrubbery and down the walk beside the spite fence. Against me the fog blew damper and chillier than before. Involuntarily I shivered.

The chief stopped short. "You're cold. You'd better go back to the house. We'll find—it—if this is the way."

"No." My teeth were chattering, but I started on. "I've something to say."

"Right! Say it." The big figure by my side was going through a surprising series of contortions. The next thing I knew, his raincoat was wrapped around me.

"It will, at least, keep you from getting any wetter. I'll send one of my men back to the house with you and he can bring it back." A big hand grasped my elbow, steadied my wavering footsteps. "You were going to say—"

In my heart a little bird burst into song. I could have hugged every one of those men. I wouldn't have to walk back to that house alone. One of the men was going back with me! Chief Forrest's words snapped me back to grim reality.

"You were going to say—"

"Dr. Paul and I found her." I gulped loudly. I couldn't help it."

"I'm sorry." The chief's voice was surprisingly soft and gentle. "That is never a pleasant experience."

"When you've finished down here, may I speak with you? I'm new here—I only came yesterday—but I know a few things. I think I can help."

My words tumbled out as jerkily as the motions of a marionette. He may think me crazy, ran my thoughts, but I don't care. I was willing to do anything, go through anything, to help Josie and Neal.

His strong fingers pressed my arm understandingly. "You're just the one I'll want to see. What is your name?"

"Sally Gordon. I called your office." I stopped short. I could see a ray of light bobbing ahead. "The light is where—she is. I won't go any further unless you wish—"

"You've done finely, Miss Gordon. I'll be asking for you later. Haines, take Miss Gordon back to the house and bring back my slicker."

I stepped to one side and waited while one, two, four, six men filed by me. As the fourth went by he seemed to me to be familiar, someone I had seen before. But I couldn't place him, and when the seventh and last stepped out of line to my side I forgot the other.

As gently as the chief had done, Haines took my arm and guided my stumbling steps. I was unspeakably weary. Hill House seemed a mile away. Don't anyone ever try to tell me that the police are heartless. No one could have been treated nicer than I was that night.

At the door I handed the chief's slicker back to Haines and went inside. The room was empty; it struck a chill to my jittery nerves. But I couldn't give up now. Josie had said she would leave everything in my hands. What should I do?

I started for the kitchen, switching on each light as I went, and leaving them burning. No dark corners for me tonight! I went to the foot of the stairs and called to Chloe. She heard me at once and came down.

"Yes, Miss Gordon. What can I do fo' yo'?" She was calmly gentle and smiling as when I first saw her. One glance at her face, unless she was a better actress than I thought, revealed her ignorance of what had happened.

"When did you come home?" I asked. Josie had casually mentioned that it was Chloe's night out.

She looked at me as though wondering by what authority I asked the question. "I jus' this minute got in," she said. "Why?" As I did not answer, she asked again: "Why? Is somethin' wrong?"

I stepped forward and laid my hand on her shoulder. "Yes, Chloe," I said slowly. "Something is terribly wrong. Mrs. Peake is—"

"Dead! Miss Peake dead! Oh, no, Miss, I guess yo' is jus' funnin,' ain't yo'?" Then, as I did not speak, she stepped backward and sat down hard on the nearest chair.

"Yo' really mean it," she said dully. "Miss Peake dead! What happened, Miss Gordon? She was all right when I went out jus' befo' nine. I saw her outside talkin' to Miss Easton."

"She was—was—somebody—" I couldn't say the word.

She was up and at me like a human cyclone. Fury blazed in her eyes. Her grip on my arm was like an iron band. She thrust her brown face into mine.

"Yo' mean—" She hissed each word in a vindictive way that made my flesh crawl. "You mean somebody KILLED her?"

I nodded. It was no use for me to try to speak. My throat had closed up.

"I've worked here fo' Miss Peake fo' six years. She was the finest white woman I ever knew. I'll do anythin' to help find who done it." She went off into a long tirade in Portuguese which I couldn't understand.

"Chloe," I said gently when her outpouring stopped, "I hate to trouble you at this hour, but Miss Josie has asked me to take the helm for a while. Do you think you can make some coffee and maybe some sandwiches. Miss Josie should have something hot to drink and—there will be a lot of others here shortly—" I couldn't go on. I just buried my face in my hands and struggled to regain my composure.

A soft hand patted my shoulder. "Don't yo' take on now, Miss Gordon. I 'speck yo're the only one that pore little girl can depend on. I'll look after things here. I'm Portuguese" (with a proud lift of her head) "an' we never let our white folks down."

The hand was withdrawn and I heard the rattle of dishes. I raised my head and looked. Chloe, the silent tears dripping down her cheeks, was going methodically about her work. I would take a lesson from her and do the same.

As I went out the door, her soft voice called after me: "Miss Gordon, I'd 'preciate fo' you' to leave the lights on."

And I was shamed by that exhibition of quiet courage.

Back to the lounge I went. It was still deserted. I poked up the fire, threw on a couple of logs and sat down to wait. But sitting quietly was not for me. I paced restlessly back and forth across the room until the door swung open and a perfect mob poured into the room.

Neal, deathly white and shaking, was supported by Dr. Paul and Chief Forrest. After them came a tall, fine-looking man in plain clothes, three police officers in olive brown uniforms, Coral Easton, Joseph Barry, Bruce Orton and Duncan Abbott.

Coral was sniffing ostentatiously into her handkerchief. She threw herself onto a davenport and promptly broke into a tumult of tears. Joseph Barry hung over her with fool pattings and a continuous murmur of words.

"Where is Josie?" were Neal's first words to me.

"In her room. Rhoda is with her."

"Is she—all right?" His eyes pleaded for reassurance.

"Standing up to it like a Spartan," I replied warmly.

"She would if it killed her." A prideful expression passed fleetingly across his face before he sank into a chair and dropped his head in his hands.

As he turned from me, Coral moved over as though inviting him to take a seat at her side. When he sat down in a chair at some distance from the davenport, she glared angrily at him around her bunched handkerchief and moved back again close to Barry.

Huh! Putting on an act, I thought disgustedly, as I turned to the chief who was speaking.

"Do you think she will be able to talk with us here?" he inquired.

"If you want her, I think she will come if she has to be carried," I answered grimly.

Chief Forrest nodded. A smile of appreciation wreathed his lips. "I admire grit," he said quietly, as he stepped to my side. He laid his hand on my arm and drew me away from the others.

Germans Leaving The Baltic States

Riga, Latvia, Oct. 10 (AP)—A great exodus of Germans from the Baltic states was in full swing tonight with a big fleet of German vessels pressed into service to carry settlers from countries passing under Russian dominance to territories newly-added to Adolph Hitler's Reich.

The German steamers already were in Riga's harbor. Four others were at Leipaja (Libeau) and Ventspils (Windou). All were loading emigrants from Latvia, with their belongings.

Four other vessels arrived at Tallinn, Estonia, to take Germans from that country.

Repatriation was obligatory only in the cases of German citizens.

Latvia's largest newspaper estimated the value of German holdings in Latvia at 1,500,000,000 Reichsmarks (about $600,000,000). It was said that some rich Germans apparently control much of the country's indupstry and have a real estate holdings.

It was generally believed in Riga that about half of the Latvian Germans, chiefly young people, would emigrate.

German organizations in Latvia were reported cooperating enthusiastically with Hitler's scheme to repatriate German settlers.

The Russian-Latvian pact, giving Moscow air and naval bases in Latvian territory and bringing thousands of Red soldiers into Latvia will be ratified tomorrow, Foreign Minister William Munters announced.

Saddles, harnesses and whips produced in the United States in 1937 had a value of $107,395,536.

Shadow Over Hill House

By ELLIOTT FILLION

SYNOPSIS

Mrs. Peake, proprietor of Hill House, New England summer resort, is found murdered by the "spite fence" erected near her property by her estranged sister, Miss Ivy Newcomb. Previous to the murder the guests had been concerned about the poisoning of one of their number, Mrs. Rutherford, who recovers; strange sounds of a prowler on the property, and the ransacking of one of the rooms. Those at Hill House besides Dr. Neal and Josie Peake, children of the dead woman, are Sally Gordon, spending her first vacation there; her close friends, Rhoda and her fiance Duncan; Dr. Paul and Pauline Rutherford, children of Mrs. Rutherford; Coral Easton, Bruce Orton and Joseph Barry. Josie is friendly with Alan Murray who lives at Miss Ivy's, and that infuriates her brother, Neal. He likes Coral Easton, for whom Josie has no use.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

THE SOUND of those motor cars was what I had been waiting for. I went to the door and threw it open as racing figures loomed out of the fog. Some were in uniform, some not. One halted the others with a gesture and, alone, came to the door. His face was stern, his voice abrupt:

"Chief of Police Forrest. You sent for me?"

"Yes. This way, please." I could be as curt as this big man in uniform. Yet under his crispness I sensed a trace of gentleness.

Without stopping to get my sweater, which I had put to dry before the fire, I led the way across the lawn, around the bridal wreath bush at the beginning of the shrubbery and down the walk beside the spite fence. Against me the fog blew damper and chillier than before. Involuntarily I shivered.

The chief stopped short. "You're cold. You'd better go back to the house. We'll find—it—if this is the way."

"No." My teeth were chattering, but I started on. "I've something to say."

"Right! Say it." The big figure by my side was going through a surprising series of contortions. The next thing I knew, his raincoat was wrapped around me.

"It will, at least, keep you from getting any wetter. I'll send one of my men back to the house with you and he can bring it back." A big hand grasped my elbow, steadied my wavering footsteps. "You were going to say—"

In my heart a little bird burst into song. I could have hugged every one of those men. I wouldn't have to walk back to that house alone. One of the men was going back with me! Chief Forrest's words snapped me back to grim reality.

"You were going to say—"

"Dr. Paul and I found her." I gulped loudly. I couldn't help it."

"I'm sorry." The chief's voice was surprisingly soft and gentle. "That is never a pleasant experience."

"When you've finished down here, may I speak with you? I'm new here—I only came yesterday—but I know a few things. I think I can help."

My words tumbled out as jerkily as the motions of a marionette. He may think me crazy, ran my thoughts, but I don't care. I was willing to do anything, go through anything, to help Josie and Neal.

His strong fingers pressed my arm understandingly. "You're just the one I'll want to see. What is your name?"

"Sally Gordon. I called your office." I stopped short. I could see a ray of light bobbing ahead. "The light is where—she is. I won't go any further unless you wish—"

"You've done finely, Miss Gordon. I'll be asking for you later. Haines, take Miss Gordon back to the house and bring back my slicker."

I stepped to one side and waited while one, two, four, six men filed by me. As the fourth went by he seemed to me to be familiar, someone I had seen before. But I couldn't place him, and when the seventh and last stepped out of line to my side I forgot the other.

As gently as the chief had done, Haines took my arm and guided my stumbling steps. I was unspeakably weary. Hill House seemed a mile away. Don't anyone ever try to tell me that the police are heartless. No one could have been treated nicer than I was that night.

At the door I handed the chief's slicker back to Haines and went inside. The room was empty; it struck a chill to my jittery nerves. But I couldn't give up now. Josie had said she would leave everything in my hands. What should I do?

I started for the kitchen, switching on each light as I went, and leaving them burning. No dark corners for me tonight! I went to the foot of the stairs and called to Chloe. She heard me at once and came down.

"Yes, Miss Gordon. What can I do fo' yo'?" She was calmly gentle and smiling as when I first saw her. One glance at her face, unless she was a better actress than I thought, revealed her ignorance of what had happened.

"When did you come home?" I asked. Josie had casually mentioned that it was Chloe's night out.

She looked at me as though wondering by what authority I asked the question. "I jus' this minute got in," she said. "Why?" As I did not answer, she asked again: "Why? Is somethin' wrong?"

I stepped forward and laid my hand on her shoulder. "Yes, Chloe," I said slowly. "Something is terribly wrong. Mrs. Peake is—"

"Dead! Miss Peake dead! Oh, no, Miss, I guess yo' is jus' funnin,' ain't yo'?" Then, as I did not speak, she stepped backward and sat down hard on the nearest chair.

"Yo' really mean it," she said dully. "Miss Peake dead! What happened, Miss Gordon? She was all right when I went out jus' befo' nine. I saw her outside talkin' to Miss Easton."

"She was—was—somebody—" I couldn't say the word.

She was up and at me like a human cyclone. Fury blazed in her eyes. Her grip on my arm was like an iron band. She thrust her brown face into mine.

"Yo' mean—" She hissed each word in a vindictive way that made my flesh crawl. "You mean somebody KILLED her?"

I nodded. It was no use for me to try to speak. My throat had closed up.

"I've worked here fo' Miss Peake fo' six years. She was the finest white woman I ever knew. I'll do anythin' to help find who done it." She went off into a long tirade in Portuguese which I couldn't understand.

"Chloe," I said gently when her outpouring stopped, "I hate to trouble you at this hour, but Miss Josie has asked me to take the helm for a while. Do you think you can make some coffee and maybe some sandwiches. Miss Josie should have something hot to drink and—there will be a lot of others here shortly—" I couldn't go on. I just buried my face in my hands and struggled to regain my composure.

A soft hand patted my shoulder. "Don't yo' take on now, Miss Gordon. I 'speck yo're the only one that pore little girl can depend on. I'll look after things here. I'm Portuguese" (with a proud lift of her head) "an' we never let our white folks down."

The hand was withdrawn and I heard the rattle of dishes. I raised my head and looked. Chloe, the silent tears dripping down her cheeks, was going methodically about her work. I would take a lesson from her and do the same.

As I went out the door, her soft voice called after me: "Miss Gordon, I'd 'preciate fo' you' to leave the lights on."

And I was shamed by that exhibition of quiet courage.

Back to the lounge I went. It was still deserted. I poked up the fire, threw on a couple of logs and sat down to wait. But sitting quietly was not for me. I paced restlessly back and forth across the room until the door swung open and a perfect mob poured into the room.

Neal, deathly white and shaking, was supported by Dr. Paul and Chief Forrest. After them came a tall, fine-looking man in plain clothes, three police officers in olive brown uniforms, Coral Easton, Joseph Barry, Bruce Orton and Duncan Abbott.

Coral was sniffing ostentatiously into her handkerchief. She threw herself onto a davenport and promptly broke into a tumult of tears. Joseph Barry hung over her with fool pattings and a continuous murmur of words.

"Where is Josie?" were Neal's first words to me.

"In her room. Rhoda is with her."

"Is she—all right?" His eyes pleaded for reassurance.

"Standing up to it like a Spartan," I replied warmly.

"She would if it killed her." A prideful expression passed fleetingly across his face before he sank into a chair and dropped his head in his hands.

As he turned from me, Coral moved over as though inviting him to take a seat at her side. When he sat down in a chair at some distance from the davenport, she glared angrily at him around her bunched handkerchief and moved back again close to Barry.

Huh! Putting on an act, I thought disgustedly, as I turned to the chief who was speaking.

"Do you think she will be able to talk with us here?" he inquired.

"If you want her, I think she will come if she has to be carried," I answered grimly.

Chief Forrest nodded. A smile of appreciation wreathed his lips. "I admire grit," he said quietly, as he stepped to my side. He laid his hand on my arm and drew me away from the others.

Two Theories On Teeth Can Be Reconciled

Combination of Brushing and Proper Diet Is Advised

By LOGAN CLENDENING M. D.

Two opinions have been advanced as to the reason for decay of teeth.

The old one, of course, is well known. Our mothers and grandmothers taught us that we should brush our teeth twice a day; this ordinary form of cleanliness was supposed to prevent germs from attacking the surface of the teeth.

Of late it has been suggested that strong teeth are made from within, that the food we eat has more to do with tooth health than cleanliness. And it has been recommended that minerals, such as calcium, and vitamins, such as Vitamin C, are the real preventatives of dental decay.

Why can not these two different ideas be reconciled? Certainly the health of the teeth is important and no amount of trouble should be too much to accomplish that end. Why not use both internal and external means? Brush your teeth twice a day, take Vitamin C in the form of orange juice and calcium in the form of milk.

Most Useful

The most useful dentifrice is probably the one that is roughest, the most abrasive. But though the abrasiveness may be high, it must not be used at the expense of the real value of the dentifrice. Chemical reactions in the dentifrice are important and have nothing to do with the actual abrasiveness of the compound. Abrasiveness means the ability to wear away the teenth by mechanical means. Pumice and silica are not harmful to the softest part of the tooth.

The best dentifrices are the simplest. The basis of most of them is powdered chalk. We can recommend the following.

Prepared chalk	2 ounces
Powdered orris root	2 ounces
Pumice stone	1 ounce

Like Painting a Fence

When you start in the morning to brush your teeth, consider them as so many pickets of a white fence and suppose you are going to paint the fence. Brush your teeth in the same orderly manner. Start at the extreme right hand corner of the upper jaw and, with your tooth brush, brush the teeth as if painting the fence; go over everything, front, back and sides. Go slowly around the front of the upper set of teeth, then turn around and go slowly back behind until you return to the place where you started from.

Then start downstairs and do the same thing with the lower set, front and back.

The motion of the tooth brush should be rotary. Dig bristles in and keep your hand moving so that the interstices between the teeth are cleaned out. The tooth brush should be small so that the bristles will fit in the mouth and make no trouble when you engage any irregular tooth. The child should learn to do this at the very earliest period of his life, and you may be assured that any time used in teaching this procedure will not be wasted.

Missouri Mules Replace Tractors Brought In To Kick Them off Job

Lacrosse, Wash. (AP)—Mechanized progress has been blocked, in one instance at least, by the old Missouri mule.

Reported "on the way out" at various times for the last 20 years because of the inroads of power machinery, the mule is stubbornly hanging on in this western wheat district.

On the 2,800-acre ranch operated by Herbert Camp, where this picture was taken, the mule not only has held his own but also has replaced tractor power after tractors had been tried out.

Camp says mules are cheaper.

The 27-mule team combine shown cut 600 acres in 17 days. Camp since returning to the mules has developed a large stud and recently shipped 70 head to the middle west and a number to Hawaii.

Warns Farmers Not To Expect Too Much

College Park, Md., Oct. 19(AP)—Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service, warned Maryland farmers today against anticipating any marked increase in demand for farm products as a result of the European war.

Dr. Symons, newly-returned from a trip to England—"the statue of Liberty never looked so grand as she did this time"—said his observations abroad inclined him against additional "war" planting in this country.

Plans in England call for an increase of acreage of plowed ground by some 250,000 acres, he explained. An organization also is being perfected throughout Britain for production of vegetables and fruits, Dr. Symons said, and many persons told him their front lawns would go into gardens next year.

On the basis of efforts being made to increase production and limit consumption overseas, he added he believed it wise for American farmers to continue current farm programs.

The true way to soften one's troubles is to solace those of others. —Mme. De Maintenon.

Spanking Good In Getting Tot Under Discipline

A Sentence to Sitting Is Advised for One Who Is Older

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Just how are you going to teach a tot to mind? Hold him? Tie him? Seize him fiercely? Give him an ugly look? Shriek at him? Or would you give him some other bodily pain, such as a slap on the bare fat thighs? Oh! you can put him in "jail." The Quints are "jailed" when naughty. The "scientific" nursery "jail" is the old dark closet.

How will you get him into this "jail?" Will you drag him there bodily? How else? Holding or tying is pretty torturous and slow. Seizing or shaking is dangerous. Give him a dirty look and what have you left for smiles of love? Shriek at him and how are you going to cultivate comradeship and affection? Why not use the hand to inflict the necessary pain in order to establish the control?

As to Isolation

Many writers tell parents to isolate the young child in order to punish him. Isolate him from whom? They are thinking of the school room, where isolation from others his age can be very effective. But the home is vastly different from the school for practically all children. Many a little child would be glad to be out of the presence of his parents for a period of time. And suppose the youngster were sent to a room and were to begin some deviltry there?

Be Practical

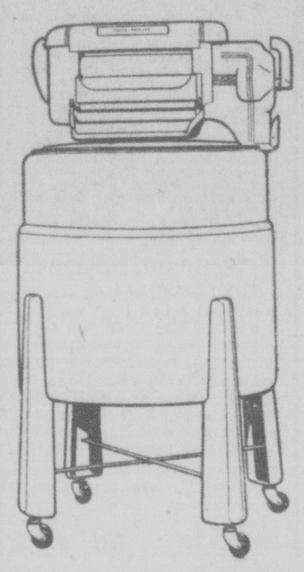

Why not be practical? As soon as your child has learned to respect authority, which should be acquired by the time he is three or four, punish him by assigning him to sit in a certain place where you can see him for a definite time (about twenty minutes). Let him know he will receive instant bodily pain if he should leave the chair without permission. This is very effective punishment, even up to the age of 10 or 12.

The Easiest Way

Suppose your child of six or seven has not yet learned the meaning of NO. He is pretty big for corporal punishment to be effective. You might, however, if you have adequate self-control, wsiely begin to establish control over him. The easiest way might be to sentence him to stay right where he happens to be at the time, to sit if he likes, with assurance to him that he will get physical pain, perhaps a paddling, if he leaves that place without permission for a specific time. This plan would limit all corporal punishment to one specific place and situation. It should be relatively safe and easy to enforce.

Drunken drivers were involved in sixteen per cent of fatal automobile accidents in Texas during the fiscal year just ended and were responsible for one-fourth of all

Every prospective bridegroom should take the following facts into consideration before he makes the most important of all purchases. First, he must select with care the jewelers because this is one of the most important steps in making the purchase. Second, he must be sure of the quality of the diamond, the cut, the beauty, the brilliance. Two Theories On Teeth Can Be Reconciled

By LOGAN CLENDENING M. D.

Two opinions have been advanced as to the reason for decay of teeth.

The old one, of course, is well known. Our mothers and grandmothers taught us that we should brush our teeth twice a day; this ordinary form of cleanliness was supposed to prevent germs from attacking the surface of the teeth.

Of late it has been suggested that strong teeth are made from within, that the food we eat has more to do with tooth health than cleanliness. And it has been recommended that minerals, such as calcium, and vitamins, such as Vitamin C, are the real preventatives of dental decay.

Why can not these two different ideas be reconciled? Certainly the health of the teeth is important and no amount of trouble should be too much to accomplish that end. Why not use both internal and external means? Brush your teeth twice a day, take Vitamin C in the form of orange juice and calcium in the form of milk.

Most Useful

The most useful dentifrice is probably the one that is roughest, the most abrasive. But though the abrasiveness may be high, it must not be used at the expense of the real value of the dentifrice. Chemical reactions in the dentifrice are important and have nothing to do with the actual abrasiveness of the compound. Abrasiveness means the ability to wear away the teenth by mechanical means. Pumice and silica are not harmful to the softest part of the tooth.

The best dentifrices are the simplest. The basis of most of them is powdered chalk. We can recommend the following.

Prepared chalk	2 ounces
Powdered orris root	2 ounces
Pumice stone	1 ounce

Like Painting a Fence

When you start in the morning to brush your teeth, consider them as so many pickets of a white fence and suppose you are going to paint the fence. Brush your teeth in the same orderly manner. Start at the extreme right hand corner of the upper jaw and, with your tooth brush, brush the teeth as if painting the fence; go over everything, front, back and sides. Go slowly around the front of the upper set of teeth, then turn around and go slowly back behind until you return to the place where you started from.

Then start downstairs and do the same thing with the lower set, front and back.

The motion of the tooth brush should be rotary. Dig bristles in and keep your hand moving so that the interstices between the teeth are cleaned out. The tooth brush should be small so that the bristles will fit in the mouth and make no trouble when you engage any irregular tooth. The child should learn to do this at the very earliest period of his life, and you may be assured that any time used in teaching this procedure will not be wasted.

Missouri Mules Replace Tractors Brought In To Kick Them off Job

Lacrosse, Wash. (AP)—Mechanized progress has been blocked, in one instance at least, by the old Missouri mule.

Reported "on the way out" at various times for the last 20 years because of the inroads of power machinery, the mule is stubbornly hanging on in this western wheat district.

On the 2,800-acre ranch operated by Herbert Camp, where this picture was taken, the mule not only has held his own but also has replaced tractor power after tractors had been tried out.

Camp says mules are cheaper.

The 27-mule team combine shown cut 600 acres in 17 days. Camp since returning to the mules has developed a large stud and recently shipped 70 head to the middle west and a number to Hawaii.

Warns Farmers Not To Expect Too Much

College Park, Md., Oct. 19(AP)—Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service, warned Maryland farmers today against anticipating any marked increase in demand for farm products as a result of the European war.

Dr. Symons, newly-returned from a trip to England—"the statue of Liberty never looked so grand as she did this time"—said his observations abroad inclined him against additional "war" planting in this country.

Plans in England call for an increase of acreage of plowed ground by some 250,000 acres, he explained. An organization also is being perfected throughout Britain for production of vegetables and fruits, Dr. Symons said, and many persons told him their front lawns would go into gardens next year.

On the basis of efforts being made to increase production and limit consumption overseas, he added he believed it wise for American farmers to continue current farm programs.

The true way to soften one's troubles is to solace those of others. —Mme. De Maintenon.

Spanking Good In Getting Tot Under Discipline

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Just how are you going to teach a tot to mind? Hold him? Tie him? Seize him fiercely? Give him an ugly look? Shriek at him? Or would you give him some other bodily pain, such as a slap on the bare fat thighs? Oh! you can put him in "jail." The Quints are "jailed" when naughty. The "scientific" nursery "jail" is the old dark closet.

How will you get him into this "jail?" Will you drag him there bodily? How else? Holding or tying is pretty torturous and slow. Seizing or shaking is dangerous. Give him a dirty look and what have you left for smiles of love? Shriek at him and how are you going to cultivate comradeship and affection? Why not use the hand to inflict the necessary pain in order to establish the control?

As to Isolation

Many writers tell parents to isolate the young child in order to punish him. Isolate him from whom? They are thinking of the school room, where isolation from others his age can be very effective. But the home is vastly different from the school for practically all children. Many a little child would be glad to be out of the presence of his parents for a period of time. And suppose the youngster were sent to a room and were to begin some deviltry there?

Be Practical

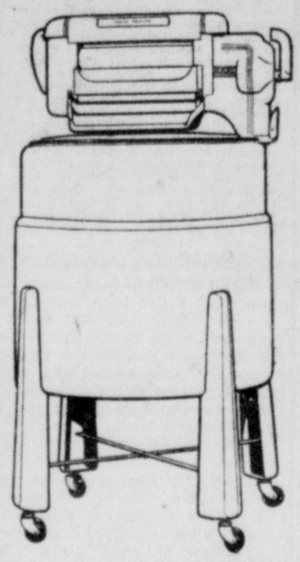

Why not be practical? As soon as your child has learned to respect authority, which should be acquired by the time he is three or four, punish him by assigning him to sit in a certain place where you can see him for a definite time (about twenty minutes). Let him know he will receive instant bodily pain if he should leave the chair without permission. This is very effective punishment, even up to the age of 10 or 12.

The Easiest Way

Suppose your child of six or seven has not yet learned the meaning of NO. He is pretty big for corporal punishment to be effective. You might, however, if you have adequate self-control, wisely begin to establish control over him. The easiest way might be to sentence him to stay right where he happens to be at the time, to sit if he likes, with assurance to him that he will get physical pain, perhaps a paddling, if he leaves that place without permission for a specific time. This plan would limit all corporal punishment to one specific place and situation. It should be relatively safe and easy to enforce.

LaSalle A. A. To Air Coach's Views Tonight

Meeting Called At Carroll Hall For All Members

Poor Showing of Football Team to Date To Be Discussed

W. A. Gunther Will Preside-Future of Team Is Chief Concern

The LaSalle Athletic Association will hold a special meeting at 7:30 o'clock this evening in Carroll Hall, North Centre street, to consider the contents of a letter sent to W. Arnold Gunther, president of the association, by Harold A. Langton, coach of the LaSalle High School football team.

The contents of the letter were not made public by Mr. Gunther who was advised that it had been sent him. It is his wish that the entire athletic association be advised of the letter's contents that such action as the members deem advisable may be taken after consideration is given to Coach Langton's views. Mr. Gunther was given to understand that Mr. Langton's opinions and reasons for the disappointing showing of the LaSalle football team to date this season are expressed in his letter.

Wants' Members Views

With this understanding Gunter has called together the athletic association that the entire story of LaSalle's failure in football may be considered by the members, and that such action as the body sees fit may be taken in the matter of trying to remedy conditions.

LaSalle's high hopes for a formidable football team under Langton were dashed with the initial game of the season when Ridgeley High completely outclassed the Blue and Gold gridders. Then Altoona turned back the Langton coached team and this was followed by a not severe 7-0 setback by St. Mary's at Clarksburg Sunday.

The score of the last game might indicate some improvement in the team except that LaSalle failed to show anything at all offensively.

Naturally LaSalle followers whose hopes were high when Langton was signed as a product of Notre Dame University are chagrined at the failure of the team. Whether this is primarily due to a lack of material or Langton's inability to impart his knowledge to his charges is the debateable question to be discussed this evening.

Bowser Exercises Fatherly Care Over Pitt Team

Pittsburgh, Oct. 10 (AP)—Coach Charley Bowser is exercising fatherly care over his eleven varsity men, anxious that they suffer no injuries in practice before the big football date with Duke Saturday.

Plans today called for the same seven young stalwarts who answered the opening whistle against West Virginia to start against the Blue Devils from Durham, N. C.

Bowser promoted sophomore Ray Kabinek to quarterback to augment Big Ben Kish, who saw heavy duty in Pitt's two first games. Tackle Al Purczenski, who dislocated a knee cap before the University of Washington game, has returned to practice.

American League Declared Superior to Senior Group

By JOHN LARDNER

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, Oct. 10—This is no time to bring up the ancient argument of National League vs. American League. The National Leaguers are stunned and browbeaten, but they still have breath in their lungs to yell, "It ain't the American League. It's those blank blank blank blank Yankees!"

Until a new style of schedule is arranged which will pit American League clubs against National League clubs over something approaching a full season of play, there will be no way of convincing these last-ditch Desmonds that they're with and in the wrong league. And maybe, by the time they do arrange a joint schedule, the National League will have caught up. That's planting my alibi for 1945.

But right now—well, the Cincinnati Reds are a good National League team, the best that Ford Christopher Frick, president of what some of the boys call the senile circuit, has been able to put on the field since 1934. A lot of National Leaguers who have seen the Yankees were disposed to pick the Reds.

Large Red Cheering Section

"They're li'ble to win," said Mr. Lippy Leo Durocher, never at a loss for a statement on any subject.

"Watch 'em go," said Mr. Laughing Larry MacPhail, "This is no one-league country."

Frank Frisch gave the Reds a chance, and so did Ray Blades and many of the National League players.

Well, they should have won one game. They had a great pitcher, the best in the series, working the first and fourth games, Paul Derringer, and hard luck beat him. Or did it? What beat him, actually, was the fundamental soundness of the Yankees and the fundamental unsoundness of the Reds.

There are three Red players who might make the Yankee team — Derringer, McCormick, and Walters. And Walters might not. There's some question as to whether his particular equipment, tough for those National League ground-ball hitters, would win in the American League.

So Cincinnati, best National League team in five years, was hopelessly outclassed. Once again the Frick chorus shouts, "it ain't the league, It's those Yankees." I doubt if that's true. What hit the Reds hardest, what destroyed their hope and their confidence, were those long fly-ball home runs which kept dropping into the stands and the nearby streets with the regularity of time-bombs. They'd seen nothing like that before. They thought they had a good-sized park, a tough park for hitters. None of their own men was able to reach the walls in this series.

About Other A. L. Clubs

That's Yankee power? Friends, there are five clubs in the American League which can molest those bleacher-sitters and those pedestrians, and do it all day long. If that's what it took to demoralize the Reds this fall, to shake the nerves of Myers and Frey and reduce Lombardi to lethargic despair, there are several of Mr. Will Harridge's outfits which could have done the job.

The American League buys and develops long hitters, while the National Leaguers comb the woods for fancy third basemen. And the funny thing is, the American Leaguers get the fancy third basemen. And the fast runners and outfielders. And the pitchers. A pitcher who faces those long hitters all year must have stuff, though the National League pitchers show gaudier records for the season, in some cases, because they work in an organiaztion where long hitters are rare.

Intra-city series will sometimes show an edge for the National League, as in the recent Chicago civil war. But over the years, in all-star games, city series, and world series, the bulge is with the league they used to call Ban Johnson's Folly. And the records will show you how big a bulge it is.

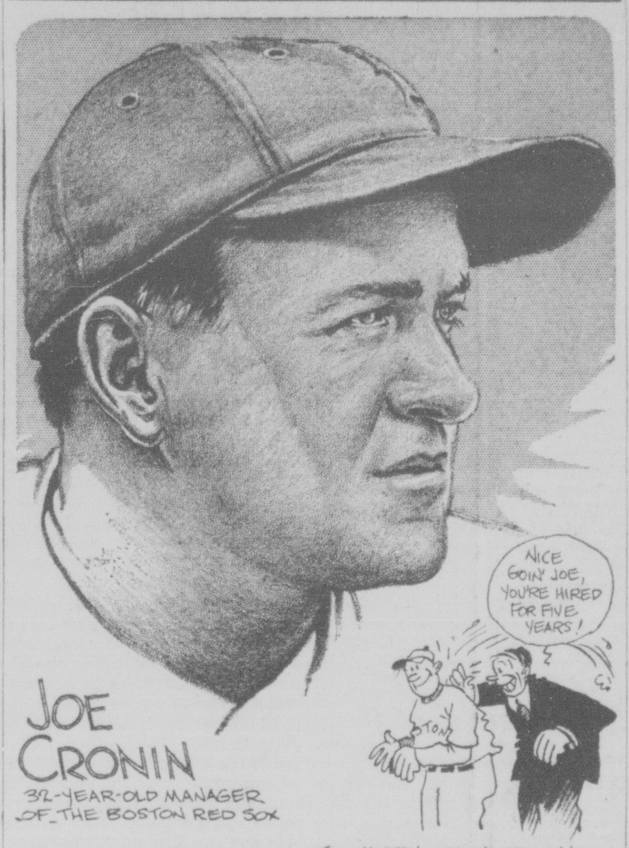

In the fourth game of the World Series of 1939, Harry Craft Cincinnati center fielder, after tying the record for strike-outs in a four-game affair, withdrew from the line-up. The announcer said, Craft has an upset stomach."

"Can you imagine an announcement like that?" demanded Frankie Frisch. "Holy smoke, why don't they say he's got a broken toe, or something?"

It was an unhappy phrase, for it seemed to sum up the feelings of all the Reds. Actually, Craft did not quit. He had real trouble, and it hurt his play and made him useless in the batting order, so he was wise to report it and yank himself from the game. But the whole Red team was hit in that same spot, in a none too figurative way, by the sight of those casual Yankee wallops to hellangone.

That's not the exception in the American League. It's the rule.

FIVE TO GO - - - - - By Jack Sords

The Sportlight BY GRANTLAND RICE

The Strength of the South

New York, Oct. 10 —With the world series out of the way until the Yankees start after four straight next year against St. Louis, Brooklyn or Cincinnati, it is high time to give more attention to an already wildly-scrambled, hectic football season.

We get back just in time after the opening salute to find Fordham, Northwestern, Minnesota, T. C. U., Holy Cross, Rice, Indiana, Stanford, Vanderbilt, Wisconsin, Missouri, Georgia Tech, Colgate, Syracuse, Columbia, California and other strong teams beaten, with Southern California, Oregon, S. M. U., Oklahoma, Nebraska, Santa Clara and a few more already tied.

The casualty list has been heavier than usual. Why is this? One reason is that certain teams are more advanced than others. The other is that we have a greater number of good teams for whom the advance bugles had played too lightly.

Out of the first scramble one of the features so far has been the strength of the South.

Dixie has moved forward at the first charge with Alabama, Tennessee, Tulane, Duke, North Carolina, Mississippi and L. S. U., moving in what seems to be a big hurry.

For example, Harry Mehre's softly heralded Ole Miss team was good enough to crack L. S. U. and L. S. U. in turn was good enough to almost completely annihilate a strong Holy Cross team that had nine senior stars on hand from last year's powerful eleven. Think that one over.

A Hectic Year

There is every indication so far that 1939 will be one of those madhouse years.

I figured the Big Ten plus Notre Dame as the strongest single sector, which indignant partisans from the South promptly and loudly disputed.

Since Nebraska whipped Minnesota and Oklahoma beat North western (23-0) and Texas overturned Wisconsin—to mention only a few casualties—the rebuttal from the South seems to be in order. Also the rebuttal from the Big Six, which includes Oklahoma and Nebraska.

As Frank Thomas told me over the long distance phone last Saturday night, this is one of the big years for the South.

"I've never seen as many strong teams in that section before," he said. "I can give you Tennessee, Tulane, Albama, L. S. U. Duke, Ole Miss, North Carolina and Auburn. I can also add Clemson, Furman, Kentucky, Vanderbilt and several more. I don't believe the Midwest can name ten teams that are better than the ten best teams in the South. I don't believe any section can. We were good enough to beat Fordham but I'd hate to say we were good enough to beat Tennessee or Tulane. I can tell you right now these are two of the best no matter where you look."

So far Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech, Cornell, Fordham, and Clipper Smith's Villanova outfit are around the top in the East. Bert Bell, head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, rates Villanova among the best anywhere from coast to coast.

Pittsburgh gets its baptism of fire Saturday against a fast powerful Duke eleven that Wallace Wade is bringing to the Panther lair. We'll know a lot more about the status of Duke and Pitt after this hookup.

"It is always hard to figure these early season games," Jimmy Crowley of Fordham said. "For example, I know Alabama outplayed us, but Alabama was much further along in timing and team development. It was much more advanced along these lines than we were, and this is no alibi.

"I know we'll be a lot better against Tulane. We needed that hard Alabama game badly to become better knitted. I know also that we can't afford to make the mistakes against Tulane that we made against Alabama—and I don't think we will. That Tulane-Fordham game should be one of the high spots of the season, for we know what Tulane has. And that is plenty."

At this extremely early date Cornell's Big Red team steps out as the main threat in the Ivy League.

Carl Snavely has quite a squad ready to handle the situation, and his game with Ohio State later on in the month will be one of the season's leading intersectional arguments. It will help to clear up a number of hot disputes.

Cornell's game with Princeton on Saturday will be one of the best the Ivy League has to offer —a hard game for Princeton to win but a better line on Cornell.

The Southwest, as usual, is in another heavy tangle.

When Texas A. and M. faces Villanova this week, and S. M. U. meets Notre Dame, we'll more than about Southwestern strength. These will be two of the hard games of the season-two of the best.

If S. M. U. was good enough to tie Oklahoma, it have plenty left even for Notre Dame which had both hands full against Georgia Tech last week.

All in all this next Saturday will be one of the high spots of a large and active autumn.

Lough Disappointed At Showing in Concord Game

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 10—After being defeated last Saturday 7-0 by Concord College, the Potomac State Catamounts are settling down to work this week. They went through a stiff practice session today, with determination to get prepared to beat Shepherd College this week. Several lighter men are trying desperately to beat the heavier first team men out of their positions, and they may do it before the week is over.

Commenting on the game with Concord Coach Lough stated, "I have never had a team that has made as little effort as that team did Saturday. The heaviest men on the field were the weakest. They didn't have any fight nor ambition to win. This week I am going to start a much lighter team. I was well pleased with the showing Joe Hughes made in his first start for Potomac State. Also, Toothman, Garlathy and O'Neil did very well."

By starting a lighter team, Lough hopes to add offensive power to the Catamounts. Blocking appeared to be the most needed property of Potomac's. They had a good passing attack, but there were no men to do the down field blocking. Also, the defense was too slow, for the fast offense of the Mountain Lions.

Home-Town Fans To Honor Keller

Frederick Will Honor Hero of World Series Tonight

Frederick, Md., Oct. 10 (AP)—Charley Keller, the Middletown Valley farm boy who became a baseball hero, returns here tomorrow to receive the adulation of home-town fans agog over his sensational slugging in the world series.

The rugged rightfielder of the Champion New York Yankees is coming down from the big city to the new home he recently built here for his wife and baby boy — and arrangements were completed today to give him a rousing reception.

Frederick was first to plan a Keller celebration but his alma mater, the University of Maryland, where "King Kong" first caught the eye of Yankee scouts, was quick to follow, announcing Thursday, Oct. 19, would be "Charley Keller day" at College Park.

At the University celebration the lad who led the world series hitters with a .438 average and socked three homers will be feted at a luncheon, be a guest at the R.O.T.C. regimental review and receive a gift at an undergraduate rally.

At Keller's home coming in Frederick tomorrow night, there will be a parade and a testimonial dinner sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Keller will receive a gift from Frederick fans.

The parade will begin at 6:30 p. m., and end at the Francis Scott Key Hotel, where the dinner will be served at 7 p. m.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, President of the University of Maryland, and Burton Shipley, baseball coach, will speak at the dinner. Edward D. Storm, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be toastmaster.

Other guests will be Keller's father, C. E. Keller, and William E. Hauver, of Middletown.

LaSalle A. A. To Air Coach's Views Tonight

Meeting Called At Carroll Hall For All Members

W. A. Gunther Will Preside-Future of Team Is Chief Concern

The LaSalle Athletic Association will hold a special meeting at 7:30 o'clock this evening in Carroll Hall, North Centre street, to consider the contents of a letter sent to W. Arnold Gunther, president of the association, by Harold A. Langton, coach of the LaSalle High School football team.

The contents of the letter were not made public by Mr. Gunther who was advised that it had been sent him. It is his wish that the entire athletic association be advised of the letter's contents that such action as the members deem advisable may be taken after consideration is given to Coach Langton's views. Mr. Gunther was given to understand that Mr. Langton's opinions and reasons for the disappointing showing of the LaSalle football team to date this season are expressed in his letter.

Wants' Members Views

With this understanding Gunter has called together the athletic association that the entire story of LaSalle's failure in football may be considered by the members, and that such action as the body sees fit may be taken in the matter of trying to remedy conditions.

LaSalle's high hopes for a formidable football team under Langton were dashed with the initial game of the season when Ridgeley High completely outclassed the Blue and Gold gridders. Then Altoona turned back the Langton coached team and this was followed by a not severe 7-0 setback by St. Mary's at Parksburg Sunday.

The score of the last game might indicate some improvement in the team except that LaSalle failed to show anything at all offensively.

Naturally LaSalle followers whose hopes were high when Langton was named as a product of Notre Dame University are chagrined at the failure of the team. Whether this is primarily due to a lack of material or Langton's inability to impart his knowledge to his charges is the debateable question to be discussed this evening.

Bowser Exercises Fatherly Care Over Pitt Team

Pittsburgh, Oct. 10 (AP)—Coach Charley Bowser is exercising fatherly care over his eleven varsity men, anxious that they suffer no injuries in practice before the big football game with Duke Saturday.

Plans today called for the same seven young stalwarts who answered the opening whistle against West Virginia to start against the Blue Devils from Durham, N. C.

Bowser promoted sophomore Ray Sabinek to quarterback to augment Ben Kish, who saw heavy duty in Pitt's two first games. Tackle Al Drezenski, who dislocated a knee cap before the University of Washington game, has returned to practice.

American League Declared Superior to Senior Group

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Oct. 10—This is no time to bring up the ancient argument of National League vs. American League. The National Leaguers are stunned and browbeaten, but they still have breath in their lungs to yell, "It ain't the American League. It's those blank blank blank blank Yankees!"

Until a new style of schedule is arranged which will pit American League clubs against National League clubs over something approaching a full season of play, there will be no way of convincing these last-ditch Desmonds that they're with and in the wrong league. And maybe, by the time they do arrange a joint schedule, the National League will have caught up. That's planting my alibi for 1945.

But right now—well, the Cincinnati Reds are a good National League team, the best that Ford Christopher Frick, president of what some of the boys call the senile circuit, has been able to put on the field since 1934. A lot of National Leaguers who have seen the Yankees were disposed to pick the Reds.

Large Red Cheering Section

"They're li'ble to win," said Mr. Lippy Leo Durocher, never at a loss for a statement on any subject.

"Watch 'em go," said Mr. Laughing Larry MacPhail. "This is no one-league country."

Frank Frisch gave the Reds a chance, and so did Ray Blades and many of the National League players.

Well, they should have won one game. They had a great pitcher, the best in the series, working the first and fourth games, Paul Derringer, and hard luck beat him. Or did it? What beat him, actually, was the fundamental soundness of the Yankees and the fundamental unsoundness of the Reds.

There are three Red players who might make the Yankee team — Derringer, McCormick, and Walters. And Walters might not. There's some question as to whether his particular equipment, tough for those National League ground-ball hitters, would win in the American League.

So Cincinnati, best National League team in five years, was hopelessly outclassed. Once again the Frick chorus shouts, "it ain't the league, It's those Yankees." I doubt if that's true. What hit the Reds hardest, what destroyed their hope and their confidence, were those long fly-ball home runs which kept dropping into the stands and the nearby streets with the regularity of time-bombs. They'd seen nothing like that before. They thought they had a good-sized park, a tough park for hitters. None of their own men was able to reach the walls in this series.

About Other A. L. Clubs

That's Yankee power? Friends, there are five clubs in the American League which can molest those bleacher-sitters and those pedestrians, and do it all day long. If that's what it took to demoralize the Reds this fall, to shake the nerves of Myers and Frey and reduce Lombardi to lethargic despair, there are several of Mr. Will Harridge's outfits which could have done the job.

The American League buys and develops long hitters, while the National Leaguers comb the woods for fancy third basemen. And the funny thing is, the American Leaguers get the fancy third basemen. And the fast runners and outfielders. And the pitchers. A pitcher who faces those long hitters all year must have stuff, though the National League pitchers show gaudier records for the season, in some cases, because they work in an organiaztion where long hitters are rare.

Intra-city series will sometimes show an edge for the National League, as in the recent Chicago civil war. But over the years, in all-star games, city series, and world series, the bulge is with the league they used to call Ban Johnson's Folly. And the records will show you how big a bulge it is.

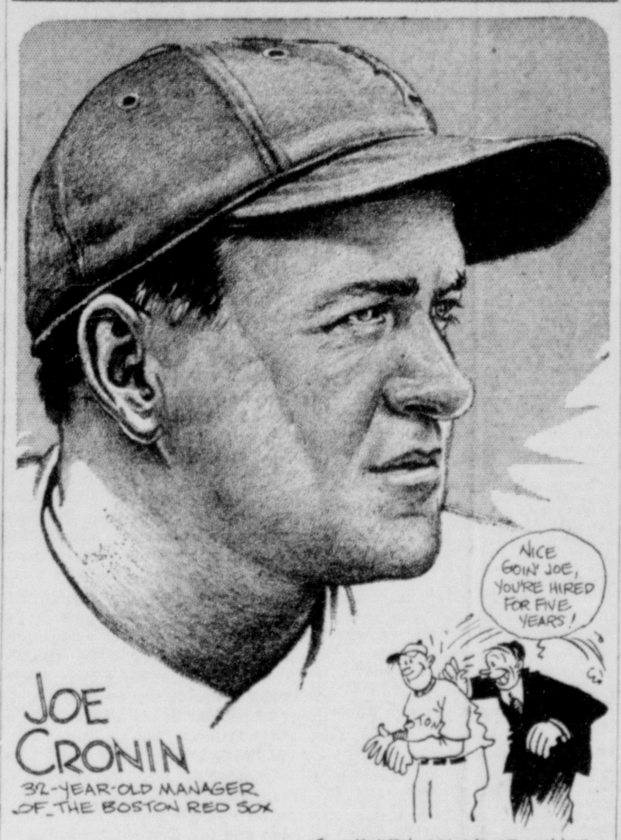

In the fourth game of the World Series of 1939, Harry Craft Cincinnati center fielder, after tying the record for strike-outs in a four-game affair, withdrew from the line-up. The announcer said, Craft has an upset stomach."

"Can you imagine an announcement like that?" demanded Frankie Frisch. "Holy smoke, why don't they say he's got a broken toe, or something?"

It was an unhappy phrase, for it seemed to sum up the feelings of all the Reds. Actually, Craft did not quit. He had real trouble, and it hurt his play and made him useless in the batting order, so he was wise to report it and yank himself from the game. But the whole Red team was hit in that same spot, in a none too figurative way, by the sight of those casual Yankee wallops to hellangone.

That's not the exception in the American League. It's the rule.

The Sportlight By Grantland Rice

The Strength of the South

New York, Oct. 10 —With the world series out of the way until the Yankees start after four straight next year against St. Louis, Brooklyn or Cincinnati, it is high time to give more attention to an already wildly-scrambled, hectic football season.

We get back just in time after the opening salute to find Fordham, Northwestern, Minnesota, T. C. U., Holy Cross, Rice, Indiana, Stanford, Vanderbilt, Wisconsin, Missouri, Georgia Tech, Colgate, Syracuse, Columbia, California and other strong teams beaten, with Southern California, Oregon, S. M. U., Oklahoma, Nebraska, Santa Clara and a few more already tied.

The casualty list has been heavier than usual. Why is this? One reason is that certain teams are more advanced than others. The other is that we have a greater number of good teams for whom the advance bugles had played too lightly.

Out of the first scramble one of the features so far has been the strength of the South.

Dixie has moved forward at the first charge with Alabama, Tennessee, Tulane, Duke, North Carolina, Mississippi and L. S. U. moving in what seems to be a big hurry.

For example, Harry Mehre's softly heralded Ole Miss team was good enough to crack L. S. U. and L. S. U. in turn was good enough to almost completely annihilate a strong Holy Cross team that had nine senior stars on hand from last year's powerful eleven. Think that one over.

A Hectic Year

There is every indication so far that 1939 will be one of those madhouse years.

I figured the Big Ten plus Notre Dame as the strongest single sector, which indignant partisans from the South promptly and loudly disputed.

Since Nebraska whipped Minnesota and Oklahoma beat Northwestern (23-0) and Texas overturned Wisconsin—to mention only a few casualties—the rebuttal from the South seems to be in order. Also the rebuttal from the Big Six, which includes Oklahoma and Nebraska.

As Frank Thomas told me over the long distance phone last Saturday night, this is one of the big years for the South.

"I've never seen as many strong teams in that section before," he said. "I can give you Tennessee, Tulane, Albama, L. S. U. Duke, Ole Miss, North Carolina and Auburn. I can also add Clemson, Furman, Kentucky, Vanderbilt and several more. I don't believe the Midwest can name ten teams that are better than the ten best teams in the South. I don't believe any section can. We were good enough to beat Fordham but I'd hate to say we were good enough to beat Tennessee or Tulane. I can tell you right now these are two of the best no matter where you look."

So far Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech, Cornell, Fordham, and Clipper Smith's Villanova outfit are around the top in the East. Bert Bell, head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, rates Villanova among the best anywhere from coast to coast.

Pittsburgh gets its baptism of fire Saturday against a fast powerful Duke eleven that Wallace Wade is bringing to the Panther lair. We'll know a lot more about the status of Duke and Pitt after this hookup.

"It is always hard to figure these early season games," Jimmy Crowley of Fordham said. "For example, I know Alabama outplayed us, but Alabama was much further along in timing and team development. It was much more advanced along these lines than we were, and this is no alibi.

"I know we'll be a lot better against Tulane. We needed that hard Alabama game badly to become better knitted. I know also that we can't afford to make the mistakes against Tulane that we made against Alabama—and I don't think we will. That Tulane-Fordham game should be one of the high spots of the season, for we know what Tulane has. And that is plenty."

At this extremely early date Cornell's Big Red team steps out as the main threat in the Ivy League.

Carl Snavely has quite a squad ready to handle the situation, and his game with Ohio State later on in the month will be one of the season's leading intersectional arguments. It will help to clear up a number of hot disputes.

Cornell's game with Princeton on Saturday will be one of the best the Ivy League has to offer —a hard game for Princeton to win but a better line on Cornell.

The Southwest, as usual, is in another heavy tangle.

When Texas A. and M. faces Villanova this week, and S. M .U. meets Notre Dame, we'll more than about Southwestern strength. These will be two of the hard games of the season-two of the best.

If S. M. U. was good enough to tie Oklahoma, it have plenty left even for Notre Dame which had both hands full against Georgia Tech last week.

All in all this next Saturday will be one of the high spots of a large and active autumn.

Army and Columbia Ready for Annual Game

Free Scoring Game at Baker Field Forecast

Dartmouth and Navy Will Clash in Baltimore Stadium

Coaches Make Interesting Discoveries in Early Games

By BILL BONI

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—Since they resumed their football rivalry in 1936, Army and Columbia some how have managed to come up to their annual game rated virtually on a par.

They'll do it again this Saturday, when Army brings its team and its smartly-clad Cadet corps into the Lions' Baker Field for the first time. Once more all signs point to a free-scoring battle in a series that has been extremely prodigal with its touchdowns.

Army won in 1936, 27-16, and again in 1937, 21-18. Last fall it was Sid Luckman who brought the Lions up from behind for a thrilling 20-18 triumph. Luckman is gone from the Columbia roster, but to offset that Army has lost Charley Long and Woodrow Wilson.

The Cadets' close calls with Furman and Centre and Columbia's defeat by Yale in its opening game also indicate there's be little to choose between the two, and since neither defense has been airtight it's likely this fourth game will follow in the series tradition of wide-open play.

At opposite ends of the football ladder, two coaches made interesting discoveries last week end. Bernie Moore of big Louisiana State, stuck for a passer, threw 158-pound Leo Bird, a newcomer, in against Holy Cross, and the sub pitched the Crusaders dizzy. Benny Friedman of Little City College found an unknown 180-pound sophomore practicing with the C. C. N. Y. freshmen last Tuesday, drafted him for the varsity, and started him against Buffalo Saturday. City College won and the youngster, Arthur Goeschel, was a standout.

Two eastern "unknown quantities" will use each other as trial horses Saturday when Navy meets Dartmouth at Baltimore. Both have had trouble getting started in their minor games, for both reserve backs have turned in better performances than the so-called first stringers.

An investigation of major college schedules shows only three games of importance booked for November 23, the president's new Thanksgiving day, and a dozen for the original "turkey day" date, Nov. 30.

In contrast, there were over two dozen Thanksgiving day contests a year ago. Such traditional Thanksgiving standbys as Penn-Cornell and Fordham-New York U. have been shifted to Nov. 25 and Dec. 2, respectively.

Williamsport Downs Celanese Local Foe

Hagerstown, Oct. 10—The Williamsport Wildcats opened their Western Maryland Soccer League schedule Sunday on the Williamsport High pitch by defeating the strong Celanese Local 1874 eleven from Barton, the final score being 8 to 3.

Barton started the scoring early in the first half when it rushed the Wildcat team off its feet and pushed three counters into the net before the Cats could get organized. The remainder of the first half was a nip-and-tuck battle with the Cats scoring four times to hold the advantage, three coming from the field and one a penalty kick.

In the final half Williamsport showed superior team play and passwork and completely outplayed Barton, scoring four more goals.

Perhaps the outstanding play of the day was a corner kick by Barnes which Long headed into the goal and a shot by M. Anderson into the upper right hand corner from 25 yards out. C. Anderson, Stumbaugh, Poffenberger, Long, R. Grimes, Brown and G. Anderson played good soccer for the winners while C. Marsh turned in several nice saves. Budries, Foley and Arnold played best for Celanese. Lineups and summary.

For that bruising fullback post, Minnesota comes up this year with Marty Christiansen, veteran plunger. Marty's play was one of the features of the Gophers' attack last year.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—He lets them pick their own neckties, but otherwise Lou Little takes care of about everything in the lives of his football players. It is this meticulous attention to detail which enables Columbia, with possibly the poorest material of any large school, to play a big time schedule with at least average success year in and year out.

A mother hen clucking over her chicks is the only rival in solicitude to this suave, polished No. 1 Lion who, with his gentle, bedside manner, could pass as a family physician in the public eye, but is a driver from away back when drilling his rather thin material for its fall battles.

Oddly enough, both sides of his nature bring an identical response from those with whom he comes in contact. He runs the legs off his football players—and they'd do anything for him. He makes a soft-spoken banquet speech—and his listeners would let him borrow their wallets.

Football writers who make trips with the Columbia squad can tell you story after story of Little's almost fanatic attention to detail; of how he will go into a dining car and peer into each bowl of oatmeal before he will let the players eat; of how he counts the bubbles in the soup.

They will tell you how, on the morning of the Rose Bowl game in 1934, after a heavy rain, Little had his assistants galloping up and down the field until their tongues hung out, trying to determine the best type of cleat to use in the soft sod.

The result of that game—an astounding upset as Columbia defeated the Stanford powerhouse, 7 to 0—probably was more than a little due to that morning exercise.

The Columbia mentor is frankness itself in discussing his team. For instance, he was describing a scrimmage the Lions had with Penn in addressing a recent meeting of football writers.

Columbia possibly is the largest school in the country from an enrollment standpoint, but there are so many graduate students, and so many of the others have no time for anything but study, that the number of candidates for the football team, as well as the quality, could be matched by many a so-called minor college.

It is Little's gigantic task to take this material and make a team which can give a good account of itself in any company, and year after year he does it.

"Sometimes it's a little thin," he said, "so I have to do what you newspaper men do when you have to write a couple of columns with only a little material. I have to pad it out a little."

Kern Dissatisfied With Line Play of Carnegie Tech

Pittsburgh, Oct. 10 (AP) — Coach Will Kern, dissatisfied with the Carnegie Tech line, changed it somewhat today in preparation for the football battle with Case at Cleveland next Saturday.

Two New Teams Join American Grid Loop

Providence, R. I., (AP)—The American Football Association, regarded as perhaps the top "minor league" professional circuit in the country, has added two new members this season, making it an 8-club loop.

The newcomers are the Providence, R. I., Steam Rollers and Wilmington, Del., Clippers. The others are the Newark Bears, Union City Rams, Jersey City Giants, Paterson Panthers, Brooklyn Eagles and Danbury Trojans.

Some of the outstanding players in this loop are grabbed by clubs in the National Football league, the "major league." Some of these clubs are "farms" of the National league teams, something along the lines of baseball's farm system.

Pirates Release Two Gridders

Nile Kinnick Stars for Iowa

Hawkeye Senior Halfback Is More than a "Triple Threat"

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 10 (AP) — (AP) — "Triple threat" doesn't go far enough for enthusiastic Iowa football fans in describing the exploits of Nile Kinnick, Hawkeye senior halfback whose play is leading the tailcorn State University out of the gridiron wilderness.

They want a term that also will take in those seven straight dropkicks the stocky senior sent through the uprights for extra points in Iowa's triumphs over South Dakota and Indiana.

He came down to earth a bit on this extra point business in the Hoosier game, missing the last three tries. His seven-straight performance is a modern Iowa football record, however, partly because the Hawkeyes haven't been in the habit lately of making the touchdowns that must precede extra-point trials.

As a dropkicker, the Iowa firebrand is just a cub. He took up the booting specialty as a serious proposition last spring under the direction of Backfield Coach Frank Carideo, who is still as good a kicker as he was in his playing days at Notre Dame.

Kinnick averaged 8.5 yards from scrimmage in the two games this year, he tossed five touchdown passes and his punts have soared high and far. Captain Erwin Prasse, an end, caught three of his aerials for scores in the Indiana game.

Nile is the team's leading scorer with thirty-one points and his gains, 223 yards in twenty-seven trials, came within twenty-five yards of equalling the achievements of the other twelve Iowa backs combined.

Last year Iowa scored only forty-six points in the entire season, twenty-seven less than the revived Hawks counted in the Indiana and South Dakota battles. The Hoosiers were beaten, 32 to 29, and South Dakota was whitewashed, 41 to 0.

Irish-Navy Game May Draw 78,189

Cleveland, Oct. 10 (AP)—Ticket sales here today indicated that a sellout crowd of 78,189 may see the Notre Dame-Navy football game at municipal stadium October 21. The stadium record is 70,184, that throng having watched the major league baseball kame played in the stadium July 31, 1932.

Navy and Notre Dame drew 70,000 for their game here and 57,000 two years later.

Tom Stidham

Part Indian himself, Tom Stidham, Oklahoma coach, has had the "Injun" sign on Big Six conference foes for two years now.

Stidham, one-eighth Creek Indian, has won 15 games while losing but three and tying two others in two years as head coach at Oklahoma.

Under Hanley

First coaching job was as assistant to Hanley at Northwestern for seven years. He came to Oklahoma to be line coach under Biff Jones in 1935. When Jones resigned, Stidham took over.

Last year Stidham's team won 10 straight games, losing only to Tennessee in the Orange Bowl game.

He uses the Warner single wing and double wingback formations on offense.

Stidham is comparatively young, being only 35 years old. He is a big fellow, weighing 235 pounds.

Denver, Oct. 10 (AP) — Any time Denver University's grid team wants to take to the air, it's all right with Hershey Young, sophomore blocking back and pass snatcher. Young is a certified airplane pilot. So are his father, two sisters and two brothers.

Red Hurler Gets Jail Sentence

Lloyd (Whitey) Moore Given Three Days in the Workhouse

Cincinnati, Oct. 10 (AP) — Lloyd (Whitey) Moore, twenty-five-year-old Reds' pitcher, was sentenced to three days in the workhouse and his driver's license was suspended for six months today on conviction in police court on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Attorney Louis Rubenstein, representing Moore, asked for a 10-day stay of execution, with bond of $1,000, indicating he contemplated an appeal.

A charge of reckless driving was dismissed. "I was not driving the car," Moore said, adding he had had beer with friends who promised to remain with him.

Army and Columbia Ready for Annual Game

Free Scoring Game at Baker Field Forecast

Dartmouth and Navy Will Clash in Baltimore Stadium

By BILL BONI

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—Since they resumed their football rivalry in 1936, Army and Columbia some how have managed to come up to their annual game rated virtually on a par.

They'll do it again this Saturday, when Army brings its team and its smartly-clad Cadet corps into the L'ons' Baker Field for the first time. Once more all signs point to a free-scoring battle in a series that has been extremely prodigal with its touchdowns.

Army won in 1936, 27-16, and again in 1937, 21-18. Last fall it was Sid Luckman who brought the Lions up from behind for a thrilling 20-18 triumph. Luckman is gone from the Columbia roster, but to offset that Army has lost Charley Long and Woodrow Wilson.

The Cadets' close calls with Furman and Centre and Columbia's defeat by Yale in its opening game also indicate there's be little to choose between the two, and since neither defense has been airtight it's likely this fourth game will follow in the series tradition of wide-open play.

At opposite ends of the football ladder, two coaches made interesting discoveries last week end. Bernie Moore of big Louisiana State, stuck for a passer, threw 158-pound Leo Bird, a newcomer, in against Holy Cross, and the sub pitched the Crusaders dizzy. Benny Friedman of Little City College found an unknown 180-pound sophomore practicing with the C. C. N. Y. freshmen last Tuesday, drafted him for the varsity, and started him against Buffalo Saturday. City College won and the youngster, Arthur Goeschel, was a standout.

Two eastern "unknown quantities" will use each other as trial horses Saturday when Navy meets Dartmouth at Baltimore. Both have had trouble getting started in their minor games, for both reserve backs have turned in better performances than the so-called first stringers.

An investigation of major college schedules shows only three games of importance booked for November 23, the president's new Thanksgiving day, and a dozen for the original "turkey day" date, Nov. 30.

In contrast, there were over two dozen Thanksgiving day contests a year ago. Such traditional Thanksgiving standbys as Penn-Cornell and Fordham-New York U. have been shifted to Nov. 25 and Dec. 2, respectively.

Williamsport Downs Celanese Local Foe

Hagerstown, Oct. 10—The Williamsport Wildcats opened their Western Maryland Soccer League schedule Sunday on the Williamsport High pitch by defeating the strong Celanese Local 1874 eleven from Barton, the final score being 8 to 3.

Barton started the scoring early in the first half when it rushed the Wildcat team off its feet and pushed three counters into the net before the Cats could get organized. The remainder of the first half was a nip-and-tuck battle with the Cats scoring four times to hold the advantage, three coming from the field and one a penalty kick.

In the final half Williamsport showed superior team play and passwork and completely outplayed Barton, scoring four more goals.

Perhaps the outstanding play of the day was a corner kick by Barnes which Long headed into the goal and a shot by M. Anderson into the upper right hand corner from 25 yards out. C. Anderson, Stumbaugh, Poffenberger, Long, R. Grimes, Brown and G. Anderson played good soccer for the winners while C. Marsh turned in several nice saves. Budries, Foley and Arnold played best for Celanese. Lineups and summary.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—He lets them pick their own neckties, but otherwise Lou Little takes care of about everything in the lives of his football players. It is this meticulous attention to detail which enables Columbia, with possibly the poorest material of any large school, to play a big time schedule with at least average success year in and year out.

A mother hen clucking over her chicks is the only rival in solicitude to this suave, polished No. 1 Lion who, with his gentle, bedside manner, could pass as a family physician in the public eye, but is a driver from away back when drilling his rather thin material for its fall battles.

Oddly enough, both sides of his nature bring an identical response from those with whom he comes in contact. He runs the legs off his football players—and they'd do anything for him. He makes a soft-spoken banquet speech—and his listeners would let him borrow their wallets.

Football writers who make trips with the Columbia squad can tell you story after story of Little's almost fanatic attention to detail; of how he will go into a dining car and peer into each bowl of oatmeal before he will let the players eat; of how he counts the bubbles in the soup.

They will tell you how, on the morning of the Rose Bowl game in 1934, after a heavy rain, Little had his assistants galloping up and down the field until their tongues hung out, trying to determine the best type of cleat to use in the soft sod.

The result of that game—an astounding upset as Columbia defeated the Stanford powerhouse, 7 to 0—probably was more than a little due to that morning exercise.

The Columbia mentor is frankness itself in discussing his team. For instance, he was describing a scrimmage the Lions had with Penn in addressing a recent meeting of football writers.

Columbia possibly is the largest school in the country from an enrollment standpoint, but there are so many graduate students, and so many of the others have no time for anything but study, that the number of candidates for the football team, as well as the quality, could be matched by many a so-called minor college.

It is Little's gigantic task to take this material and make a team which can give a good account of itself in any company, and year after year he does it.

"Sometimes it's a little thin," he said, "so I have to do what you newspaper men do when you have to write a couple of columns with only a little material. I have to pad it out a little."

Kern Dissatisfied With Line Play of Carnegie Tech

Pittsburgh, Oct. 10 (AP) — Coach Will Kern, dissatisfied with the Carnegie Tech line, changed it somewhat today in preparation for the football battle with Case at Cleveland next Saturday.

Two New Teams Join American Grid Loop

Providence, R. I., (AP)—The American Football Association, regarded as perhaps the top "minor league" professional circuit in the country, has added two new members this season, making it an 8-club loop.

The newcomers are the Providence, R. I., Steam Rollers and Wilmington, Del., Clippers. The others are the Newark Bears, Union City Rams, Jersey City Giants, Paterson Panthers, Brooklyn Eagles and Danbury Trojans.

Some of the outstanding players in this loop are grabbed by clubs in the National Football league, the "major league." Some of these clubs are "farms" of the National league teams, something along the lines of baseball's farm system.

Pirates Release Two Gridders

Hawkeye Senior Halfback Is More than a "Triple Threat"

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 10 (AP) — (AP) — "Triple threat" doesn't go far enough for enthusiastic Iowa football fans in describing the exploits of Nile Kinnick. Hawkeye senior halfback whose play is leading the tailcorn State University out of the gridiron wilderness.

They want a term that also will take in those seven straight dropkicks the stocky senior sent through the uprights for extra points in Iowa's triumphs over South Dakota and Indiana.

He came down to earth a bit on this extra point business in the Hoosier game, missing the last three tries. His seven-straight performance is a modern Iowa football record, however, partly because the Hawkeyes haven't been in the habit lately of making the touchdowns that must precede extra-point trials.

As a dropkicker, the Iowa firebrand is just a cub. He took up the booting specialty as a serious proposition last spring under the direction of Backfield Coach Frank Carideo, who is still as good a kicker as he was in his playing days at Notre Dame.

Kinnick averaged 8.5 yards from scrimmage in the two games this year, he tossed five touchdown passes and his punts have soared high and far. Captain Erwin Prasse, an end, caught three of his aerials for scores in the Indiana game.

Nile is the team's leading scorer with thirty-one points and his gains, 223 yards in twenty-seven trials, came within twenty-five yards of equalling the achievements of the other twelve Iowa backs combined.

Last year Iowa scored only forty-six points in the entire season, twenty-seven less than the revived Hawks counted in the Indiana and South Dakota battles. The Hoosiers were beaten, 32 to 29, and South Dakota was whitewashed, 41 to 0.

Irish-Navy Game May Draw 78,189

Cleveland, Oct. 10 (AP)—Ticket sales here today indicated that a sellout crowd of 78,189 may see the Notre Dame-Navy football game at municipal stadium October 21. The stadium record is 70,184, that throng having watched the major league baseball kame played in the stadium July 31, 1932.

Navy and Notre Dame drew 70,000 for their game here and 57,000 two years later.

Tom Stidham

Part Indian himself, Tom Stidham, Oklahoma coach, has had the "Injun" sign on Big Six conference foes for two years now.

Stidham, one-eighth Creek Indian, has won 15 games while losing but three and tying two others in two years as head coach at Oklahoma.

Under Hanley

First coaching job was as assistant to Hanley at Northwestern for seven years. He came to Oklahoma to be line coach under Biff Jones in 1935. When Jones resigned, Stidham took over.

Last year Stidham's team won 10 straight games, losing only to Tennessee in the Orange Bowl game.

He uses the Warner single wing and double wingback formations on offense.

Stidham is comparatively young, being only 35 years old. He is a big fellow, weighing 235 pounds.

Attorney Louis Rubenstein, representing Moore, asked for a 10-day stay of execution, with bond at $1,000, indicating he contemplates an appeal.

A charge of reckless driving was dismissed. "I was not driving the car," Moore said, adding he had been with friends who promised to remain with him.

Parsons Reaches Semi-Finals in Tennis Tourney

Al Ritzenberg of Maryland University Wins Long Match

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP) — Delos (Deacon) Parsons battered his way through the quarterfinals of the Tenth Annual Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament today with a 6-3, 6-6 victory over troublesome Bill Washburn of Washington and Lee.

The eighteen-year-old Marshall College sophomore, who holds the West Virginia closed title, experienced some trouble in finding his game but once on stride he bettered Washburn's best with a smashing service and brilliant work at the net.

The triumph gave Parsons the right to meet Charles Channing of the University of Virginia in the semi-finals tomorrow.

Channing defeated his doubles teammate from Virginia, Dick Feuille, with a pretty exhibition of softballing which overcame the hard-hitting Feuille, 6-4, 7-5.

Bill Rawlings of the University of North Carolina was extended to three sets to defeat his Tarheel colleague, William Meserol, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Rawlings' superior control gained him the victory.

In the final match of the quarterfinals, Al Ritzenberg of the University of Maryland won a two hour and a half match from Hughes Davis of Guilford 11-13, 6-1, 6-2.

Ritzenberg's speed was of no avail as Davis forced him to play a softball game to take the first set but the Marylander bettered Davis' play in the second and third.

The defending doubles champions, North Carolina, won an easy 6-3, 6-1 victory over F. A. Dudderar and T. O. Coffield of West Virginia University to go into the semi-finals against Guilford.

The Guilford team of Don McAuslan and Hughes Davis took Penn State's Malcolm Weinstein and Jerry Goodman into camp 6-0, 6-2.

The Southern Conference champions of Maryland, Nathan Askin and Al Ritzenberg, were extended to the limit to win a 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 victory from Bill Washburn and Bob Robertson of Washington and Lee.

The University of Virginia outfit of Charles Channing and Dick Feuille took Muhlenberg's Ray Moats and Jack Minogue to the guidelines 6-4, 8-6.

Dapper Dan Gross Profit Is $7,000

Pittsburgh, Oct. 10 (AP) — The unique $10,000 Dapper Dan Open golf tournament here last August provided a gross profit of almost $7,000 of which $3,000 went to Pittsburgh charities, Chairman Al Abrams announced.

One-half of thep rofits went to the Wildwood Country Club, where the five-day tournament was staged. Ralph Guldahl won the $2,500 first prize. Denny Shute, who was second, and Gene Sarazen, who finished third, split $962.35 as their share of the receipts in a 18-hole playoff after they had tied for the 72 holes.

Abrams "organized" the Dapper Dans several years ago by naming a couple of the town's better dressed men in his column in the Post-Gazette. The idea of a tournament to aid charities developed later.

White Sox Win Fifth Straight City Championship

Defeat Cubs 7 to 1 in Seventh Game of Fall Series

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP) — The Chicago White Sox won their fifth consecutive city baseball championship tonight, defeating their National League neighbors, the Cubs, 7 to 1, in the seventh and deciding game of the series.

A crowd of 14,781 braved 53-degree weather to see Ted Lyons, 38-year-old Sox veteran, set the Cubs down with five hits to become the only pitcher on either team to win two games in this year's municipal title battle.

The Cubs last won the city title in 1939. The American Leaguers won the crown in 1931, 1933, 1936 and 1937, no series being played in the other years. Tonight's victory gave the Sox 16 victories and the Cubs five in their rivalry dating back to 1903.

British Shoot at Figures of Hitler

London, Oct. 10 (AP)—For a sixpence, about a dime, Britishers now can obey that impulse to work off hate against a prominent Nazi.

Shooting galleries around London have introduced targets that are figures of Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, Von Ribbentrop and other German leaders.

The faces show the Nazis looking over their shoulders at the marksman and howling with pain.

Just Won't Quit

Faducah, Ky., (AP)—Ben Tincup and Charles Eckert, one-time major leaguers, still show-em how to pitch down in the class D Kitty league.

Tincup, nearing the 50-year mark, manages the Paducah club and Eckert pilots Fulton.

As the league clubs started the stretch drive with pitching staffs in a bad way, the two managers started on the mound for their teams.

Tincup won the duel, 2 to 1, scored the winning run in the ninth with a sacrifice fly and was credited with a stolen base.

It was the first full game Tincup had hurled this season and the second for Eckert.

Crosley Injured

Cincinnati, Oct. 10 (AP) — Powel Crosley, Jr., president of the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the Crosley Manufacturing Co., was in a hospital today with injuries suffered Sunday when he fell from a horse at his estate near North Vernon, Ind.

Physicians said x-ray examination showed the projecting parts of three vertebrae broken and explained Crosley must remain in a cast "at least six weeks but the injury will not be permanent."

Dodgers Politicians?

Broklyn, Dodger fans are hoping that 1940 is their year — and there is some precedent for their thinking so. The Brooklyn team has always done its best during "Presidential years." Brooklyn's only two pennants were won in 1916 and 1920, and the two best years since were in 1924, when they finished second, and in 1932 when they finished third.

Terrific Drive

Louis Pagliaro, Brooklyn table tennis star, is only five feet one inch tall, but his drives travel at a scientifically estimated speed of 250 miles an hour.

The deepest gold mine in the world is in Brazil. It goes more than a mile down into the earth.

Duke's Rose Bowl Team, Led by Brothers McAfee, Appears Headed for Another Good Year under Wade

BY WALTER L. JOHNS
Sports Editor Central Press

Led by what may turn out to be the most famous brother act in college football this year, Duke university's Blue Devils once again bid for national honors with a fine team coached by Wallace Wade, Rose Bowl veteran.

For 40 seconds last January 1 the Duke Blue Devils let their guard down and tasted defeat after running up nine straight wins without a loss. Five veterans of that 40-second spasm are members of the present team and they won't let the newcomers forget that half minute.

Duke beat Davidson, always a good team, then downed Colgate at Durham 37 to 0 before going to Pittsburgh to play the Panthers. Then follows games with Syracuse, Wake Forest, Georgia Tech, V.M.I., North Carolina and finally North Carolina State. If the Blue Devils get by the Panthers, only the Tarheels of North Carolina should give them much trouble.

From Ironton, O.

But getting back to that brother act. Both backs, the boys are George and Wesley McAfee, of Ironton, O. George, out most of last season with a foot ailment, is the quarterback and Wes, a soph last year, has been assigned the task of filling the brogans of Eric Tipton, Duke's All-American punting favorite last year.

The veterans Wade used to trim Davidson in the first game included Capt. Allen Johnson and Frank Ribar, guards; Willard Eaves, half, and ends Willard Perdue and Bill Bailey.

Johnson, nicknamed "Sweet Pea" because of his good nature, is a 195-pound leader who plays an aggressive line position. Ribar is a 190-pounder. Perdue, 195 pounds and an all-conference end last year, is the Blue Devils hope for All-American honors. Bailey, 199-pounder, is a pass snatcher. Eaves is the blocking back. He calls the signals.

The McAfees take over two posts in the backfield. Steve Lash, sparkplug of the 1938 frosh, looked good against Davidson. Roger Robinson, who subbed for Bob O'Mara at the plunging post last year, does the fullbacking.

Ruffa in Line

The tackles are Tony Ruffa, a good kicker whose three points in the Rose Bowl game this year almost turned the trick, and Alex Winterson, rugged substitute last year.

Gordon Burns, understudy to All-American Dan Hill, does the centering. He was a letterman as a soph in 1937, but was kept out of action by Hill's fine play last season.

Duke presents a very heavy team, but Wallace Wade may do a bit of experimenting before the club gets going to the hilt.

Bears Set Offensive Pace In Pro Grid Loop

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—National Football League statistics today showed the Chicago Bears setting the offensive pace with one of the most powerful attacks ever let loose in the pro circuit, and the entire league apparently living up to its coaches' predictions that this be a record-breaking offensive season.

In four games the Bears have piled up 1,433 yards, an average of 358, and have scored 113 points, an average of 28 per game.

Backing this display are demonstrations of passing proficiency by the Cleveland Rams, Washington Redskins, and the Bears. All three are ahead of the 1938 record of 48 per cent. efficiency set by the champion New York Giants; Cleveland, with 55 completions in 101 attempts for 54 per cent.; Washington, with 56 per cent., and the Bears with an even 50 per cent.

The Detroit Lions, Western division leaders, and the Giants, tied with Washington for the Eastern lear, have the top defensive records. The Lions have held their rivals to 467 yards in three games, while the Giants have given up only 10 points in the same number of contests.

Why, Johnny!

Cincinnati, (AP) — Johnny Vander Meer, the no-hit ace, always lays his glove face up on the sidelines when he comes into the dugout after pitching an inning.

Parsons and Thomas Will Play Friday

Parsons, Oct. 10 — Thomas high schools will battle it out here Friday afternoon in what is expected to be a hard fought game. In the game last year at Thomas, a free-for-all developed on the field during the game.

Davis was defeated in a night game last night at Charles Town before a crowd of approximately 2,000 persons by a score of 21-6. Iden scored in the second quarter for Davis by throwing a pass to Gaynor back of the goal line. Mooreland, Whitmore and Williams made the scores for Charles Town. Davis will play Saturday at Greenbank.

Maryland Wants Harlow

Don't be surprised if Dick Harlow leaves Harvard after this season and becomes athletic director and football coach at the University of Maryland. Curly Byrd has been after him.

Meade 'Considers' $20,000 Fight Offer

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 10 (AP)—Eddie Meade, manager of Welterweight Henry Armstrong, said today he had not decided on the offer of Promoter Phil Glassman to pay $20,000 to Armstrong to defend his title against the winner of the Al Nettlow-Leonard Del Genjo fight in Philadelphia October 18. Meade said he had the matter "under consideration."

Nebraska Team Wins 39 in Row

Ord, Neb., Oct. 10 (AP) — If Ord High School, now with 39 consecutive football victories, gets beat by Burwell next Friday Coach Jim Kell won't have to look for an alibi.

For Friday will be the thirteenth day of the month and the game will be the thirteenth between Ord and Burwell.

"But," says Kell, "we are not superstitious."

North End Raiders To Play Sunday

The North End Raiders' football team will probably play their first season game Sunday, against the classy Mt. Savage Cinder Tips. The kick-off is scheduled for 2 o'clock. All Raider gridders are urged to be on the field no later than 1:45 p. m.

Yearlings Gain on Maryland Varsity With Virginia Plays

College Park, Md., Oct. 10 (AP)—The University of Maryland Frosh squad gained ground with disturbing consistency today, using University of Virginia plays against the Varsity which goes to Charlottesville Saturday to take on the Cavaliers.

The yearlings got over the ground with both running and aerial plays off Cavalier formations.

Late in the scrimmage the varsity tightened up, with Bernie Ulman, rookie half-back, doing a good job in the secondary defense. It appeared certain today that sophomore Ralph Burlin would be in at left tackle Saturday. Bob Brown, the injured senior regular, was not in uniform.

Challedon and Hash To Meet at Keeneland

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 10 (AP)—W. L. Brann's Challedon, leading 3-year-old money winner, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash are to meet in the $5,000 weight-for-age race for 3-year-olds and upward tomorrow, inaugurating the 10-day fall program at Keeneland.

Also expected to be an entry in the race over a mile and one-sixteenth is Warren Wright's Easy Mon, which won the Jerome Handicap at Belmont Park last week.

Starting tonight and continuing through Thursday, the annual Lexington fall sales will be conducted, with more than 500 thoroughbreds scheduled to be sold.

Friday night the annual banquet of the Thoroughbred Club of America will be held, honoring Major Carleton F. Duke, former chairman of the California horse-racing board.

Parsons Reaches Semi-Finals in Tennis Tourney

Al Ritzenberg of Maryland University Wins Long Match

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP) — Delos (Deacon) Parsons battered his way through the quarterfinals of the Tenth Annual Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament today with a 6-3, 6-6 victory over troublesome Bill Washburn of Washington and Lee.

The eighteen-year-old Marshall College sophomore, who holds the West Virginia closed title, experienced some trouble in finding his game but once on stride he bettered Washburn's best with a smashing service and brilliant work at the net.

The triumph gave Parsons the right to meet Charles Channing of the University of Virginia in the semi-finals tomorrow.

Channing defeated his doubles teammate from Virginia, Dick Feuille, with a pretty exhibition of softballing which overcame the hard-hitting Feuille, 6-4, 7-5.

Bill Rawlings of the University of North Carolina was extended to three sets to defeat his Tarheel colleague, William Meserol, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Rawlings' superior control gained him the victory.

In the final match of the quarterfinals, Al Ritzenberg of the University of Maryland won a two hour and a half match from Hughes Davis of Guilford 11-13, 6-1, 6-2.

Ritzenberg's speed was of no avail as Davis forced him to play a softball game to take the first set but the Marylander bettered Davis' play in the second and third.

The defending doubles champions, North Carolina, won an easy 6-3, 6-1 victory over F. A. Dudderar and T. O. Coffield of West Virginia University to go into the semi-finals against Guilford.

The Guilford team of Don McAuslan and Hughes Davis took Penn State's Malcolm Weinstein and Jerry Goodman into camp 6-0, 6-2.

The Southern Conference champions of Maryland, Nathan Askin and Al Ritzenberg, were extended to the limit to win a 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 victory from Bill Washburn and Bob Robertson of Washington and Lee.

The University of Virginia outfit of Charles Channing and Dick Feuille took Muhlenberg's Ray Moats and Jack Minogue to the guidelines 6-4, 8-6.

Candy Kitchen Quint To Map Court Plans

Sam's Candy Kitchen basketball team, winners of the Booster League crown for the 1939 season with 20 wins and one defeat, will hold a meeting in the Booster A.A. club room tonight at eight o'clock to discuss plans for the coming season.

The Candy Kitchen team last season was defeated by the Rice A. C. of the Booster League and the Dragons in an early season game. They copped 20 league games and 10 exhibition games. Players who are expected to report are, "Fuzzy" Hoyle, John Wilson, Roy Whiteman, Lloyd Cornwell, Vernon Willard, Ray Hahne, Ray Kammauf, Harold Fraley, all from last year's team, and "Pooch" Ornduff, "Chick" Snider, "Chet" Collins, "Joe" Wagner, and "Bee" Ornduff all new members.

Ray Whiteman and Ray Kammauf of the Candy Kitchen were picked on the All-Star team last season while "Chet" Collins, former A. and Z. player from the same league, was another all-star.

Dapper Dan Gross Profit Is $7,000

Pittsburgh, Oct. 10 (AP) — The unique $10,000 Dapper Dan Open golf tournament here last August provided a gross profit of almost $7,000 of which $3,000 went to Pittsburgh charities, Chairman Al Abrams announced.

One-half of thep rofits went to the Wildwood Country Club, where the five-day tournament was staged. Ralph Guldahl won the $2,500 first prize. Denny Shute, who was second, and Gene Sarazen, who finished third, split $962.35 as their share of the receipts in a 18-hole playoff after they had tied for the 72 holes.

Abrams "organized" the Dapper Dans several years ago by naming a couple of the town's better dressed men in his column in the Post-Gazette. The idea of a tournament to aid charities developed later.

White Sox Win Fifth Straight City Championship

Defeat Cubs 7 to 1 in Seventh Game of Fall Series

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP) — The Chicago White Sox won their fifth consecutive city baseball championship tonight, defeating their National League neighbors, the Cubs, 7 to 1, in the seventh and deciding game of the series.

A crowd of 14,781 braved 53-degree weather to see Ted Lyons, 38-year-old Sox veteran, set the Cubs down with five hits to become the only pitcher on either team to win two games in this year's municipal title battle.

The Cubs last won the city title in 1939. The American Leaguers won the crown in 1931, 1933, 1936 and 1937, no series being played in the other years. Tonight's victory gave the Sox 16 victories and the Cubs five in their rivalry dating back to 1903.

British Shoot at Figures of Hitler

London, Oct. 10 (AP)—For a sixpence, about a dime, Britishers now can obey that impulse to work off hate against a prominent Nazi.

Shooting galleries around London have introduced targets that are figures of Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, Von Ribbentrop and other German leaders.

Just Won't Quit

Tincup, nearing the 50-year mark, manages the Paducah club and Eckert pilots Fulton.

As the league clubs started the stretch drive with pitching staffs in a bad way, the two managers started on the mound for their teams.

Tincup won the duel, 2 to 1, scored the winning run in the ninth with a sacrifice fly and was credited with a stolen base.

It was the first full game Tincup had hurled this season and the second for Eckert.

Crosley Injured

Cincinnati, Oct. 10 (AP) — Powel Crosley, Jr., president of the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the Crosley Manufacturing Co., was in a hospital today with injuries suffered Sunday when he fell from a horse at his estate near North Vernon, Ind.

Physicians said x-ray examination showed the projecting parts of three vertebrae broken and explained Crosley must remain in a cast "at least six weeks but the injury will not be permanent."

Dodgers Politicians?

Broklyn, Dodger fans are hoping that 1940 is their year — and there is some precedent for their thinking so. The Brooklyn team has always done its best during "Presidential years." Brooklyn's only two pennants were won in 1916 and 1920, and the two best years since were in 1924, when they finished second, and in 1932 when they finished third.

Terrific Drive

Louis Pagliaro, Brooklyn table tennis star, is only five feet one inch tall, but his drives travel at a scientifically estimated speed of 250 miles an hour.

The deepest gold mine in the world is in Brazil. It goes more than a mile down into the earth.

Sports Editor Central Press

Led by what may turn out to be the most famous brother act in college football this year, Duke university's Blue Devils once again bid for national honors with a fine team coached by Wallace Wade, Rose Bowl veteran.

For 40 seconds last January 1 the Duke Blue Devils let their guard down and tasted defeat after running up nine straight wins without a loss. Five veterans of that 40-second spasm are members of the present team and they won't let the newcomers forget that half minute.

Duke beat Davidson, always a good team, then downed Colgate at Durham 37 to 0 before going to Pittsburgh to play the Panthers. Then follows games with Syracuse, Wake Forest, Georgia Tech, V.M.I., North Carolina and finally North Carolina State. If the Blue Devils get by the Panthers, only the Tarheels of North Carolina should give them much trouble.

From Ironton, O.

But getting back to that brother act. Both backs, the boys are George and Wesley McAfee, of Ironton, O. George, out most of last season with a foot ailment, is the quarterback and Wes, a soph last year, has been assigned the task of filling the brogans of Eric Tipton, Duke's All-American punting favorite last year.

The veterans Wade used to trim Davidson in the first game included Capt. Allen Johnson and Frank Ribar, guards; Willard Eaves, half, and ends Willard Perdue and Bill Bailey.

Johnson, nicknamed "Sweet Pea" because of his good nature, is a 195-pound leader who plays an aggressive line position. Ribar is a 190-pounder. Perdue, 195 pounds and an all-conference end last year, is the Blue Devils hope for All-American honors. Bailey, 199-pounder, is a pass snatcher. Eaves is the blocking back. He calls the signals.

The McAfees take over two posts in the backfield. Steve Lash, sparkplug of the 1938 frosh, looked good against Davidson. Roger Robinson, who subbed for Bob O'Mara at the plunging post last year, does the fullbacking.

Ruffa in Line

The tackles are Tony Ruffa, a good kicker whose three points in the Rose Bowl game this year almost turned the trick, and Alex Winterson, rugged substitute last year.

Gordon Burns, understudy to All-American Dan Hill, does the centering. He was a letterman as a soph in 1937, but was kept out of action by Hill's fine play last season.

Duke presents a very heavy team, but Wallace Wade may do a bit of experimenting before the club gets going to the hilt.

Bears Set Offensive Pace In Pro Grid Loop

New York, Oct. 10 (AP)—National Football League statistics today showed the Chicago Bears setting the offensive pace with one of the most powerful attacks ever let loose in the pro circuit, and the entire league apparently living up to its coaches' predictions that this be a record-breaking offensive season.

In four games the Bears have piled up 1,433 yards, an average of 358, and have scored 113 points, an average of 28 per game.

Backing this display are demonstrations of passing proficiency by the Cleveland Rams, Washington Redskins, and the Bears. All three are ahead of the 1938 record of 48 per cent. efficiency set by the champion New York Giants; Cleveland, with 55 completions in 101 attempts for 54 per cent.; Washington, with 56 per cent., and the Bears with an even 50 per cent.

The Detroit Lions, Western division leaders, and the Giants, tied with Washington for the Eastern lear, have the top defensive records. The Lions have held their rivals to 467 yards in three games, while the Giants have given up only 10 points in the same number of contests.

Foresters Near Parsons Get Set To Check Fire Losses

Parsons, W. Va., Oct. 10 — Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Ware, 97, died at her home near Beverly yesterday. She had been ill the past year. She was the widow of Benjamin Ware, who died in 1914. She was born near Elkwater, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Louk. She is survived by four children, forty-three grandchildren, fifty-seven great-grandchildren, and four great-great-grandchildren.

Fire Precautions Taken

At this time of year there is quite a bit of activity beginning throughout the Monongahela National forest in this area. The woods are very dry, the leaves are falling fast, and streams are low, all of which has resulted in lookouts being placed in three forest observation towers to watch for fires. William Kramer is in the Canaan lookout tower, Louis Williams at Bickle's Knob, and Felix Wilfong at the Backbone Mountain tower.

Ranger R. L. Rowland, in charge of the local forest office, stated that William Combs, Parsons, had been made a state ranger. Otis Fansler, Hendricks, will be "smoke chaser", and a dispatcher has been put on duty at the forestry office here.

Included in the activities is a crew of men working under W. W. Myers, Parsons, building a retaining wall on Dry Fork, and another crew building a concrete mat at the Laurel Run bridge.

Mr. Rowland said that at this time of year there were many tourists wondering if they could travel through the forest. He wishes it to be known that travel is permitted at all times in the forest. He also added that there are no unusual restrictions on hunting in the national forest except on game preserves.

He said that hunting this fall and in future seasons will be improved and game will be more plentiful if caution is exercised in the use of fire and smoking, and if state laws and bag limits are observed.

A ten-acre fire was reported yesterday as burning over private land near Beechwood.

"If you build a fire, be sure it is dead out when you leave it", Ranger Rowland said. He wishes to remind folks that a campfire permit is required to build a fire in the Monongahela National forest.

In case persons who see fires which they cannot put out are asked to notify the district ranger here, the nearest lookout tower, or the nearest CCC camp.

Need Strong Army To Enforce Monroe Doctrine, Johnson Says

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP) — The nation should profit from the lessons of the Polish War, Assistant Secretary of War Louis A. Johnson said today, and "build up our army and our navy so that they may be strong enough to maintain and to give reality to" the Monroe Doctrine.

"We must stand ready to join in protecting the hemisphere should occasion arise," Johnson told members of the International Association of Casualty and Surety Underwriters and The National Association of Casualty and Surety Agents, meeting in joint convention.

"Polish territory was overrun in the first place because Polish M-day troops were not ready," Johnson asserted.

"We too have M-day troops and in an emergency they, too, would not be ready. They are our minutemen, our present regulars and national guardsmen, approximately 400,000 in number. If called out today, they would find themselves faced with shortages of combat cars, tanks, machine guns, gas masks, fire control instruments and other necessities."

Some military defects are being overcome, he said, but "industry is not yet educated to manufacture all of our needs."

"Besides, when the last Congress was in session, we spoke of M-day troops to the number of 400,000 but in the light of present conditions, even the most conservative, estimate a need for 600,000."

He advocated intensive field maneuvers to give the nation's officers —"I doubt whether any army in the world has a more intelligent and better trained staff in the theory of warfare than we have"—practical experience.

Johnson, again turning to the defeat of Poland, said Germany's prewar estimate of her air capabilities "had proved itself no mere bluff."

The United States realized, after Munich, the importance of this arm of service, he went on, and Congress authorized a force of 5,500 planes by June, 1941. This seemed a "satisfactory number but history was made last month and we must keep abreast of developments."

German mechanization contributed largely to the swift conquest of Poland, the assistant secretary asserted, pointing out that while we have not "even one full strength mechanized brigade" Germany used 10 mechanized (Panzer) divisions in Poland alone.

He cautioned against putting too much faith in other factors—the rains on which Poland counted to bog down German mechanized troops did not come.

Far-cruising submarines and long-range bombers are rapidly breeching the barriers of the oceans, he declared, adding:

"No, we should depend on no one but ourselves. We should make ourselves so strong on land, on sea and in the air that potential enemies will stop, look and listen before trying to invade our territory or to violate our rights as a nation or as individuals."

Bank Night Winner Forgot To Buy Ticket; Won't Get the $400

Williamson, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP)—Circuit Judge Charles J. Ferguson sustained today a theatre's contention that "bank night" is "contrary to public policy, involving a game of chance" and held it did not have to pay Dewey Boaz $400 because the lottery is "unenforceable in a court of law."

Boaz sued the Cinderella Theatre for $400, claiming the manager withheld that amount after his name was drawn on the stage on "bank night."

The theatre said it did not pay off because Boaz had not purchased an admission ticket on the day of the drawing as required by the rules.

It demurred to the petition, asserting "the alleged contract upon which the plaintiff sues is void for lack of valid consideration and the alleged contract upon which action is based is illegal and void in its exception, is contrary to public policy, involving a game of chance, and therefore unenforceable in a court of law."

J. M. Jordan, Boaz' counsel, said he would seek to have the ruling certified to the Supreme Court, and if the Appellate Court upholds Ferguson's stand, seek an injunction against bank nights in this locality.

Lady Shorn of Locks By Very Bold Burglar

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP)—Two luxurious braids of hair three feet long hung lugubriously from the wall instead of Mrs. Hennegen's head tonight.

Mrs. Hennegen blamed a burglar for the loss of the tresses, which never before had been cut.

Police received a call from much-perturbed W. F. Hennegen that he and his wife, Bessie May, awoke to find that $2 had been stolen from his trousers and his wife's knee-length braids had been shorn close to her head.

Outside the house, he reported to Detective Lieutenant E. F. Bourne, was found the cropped hair.

Bourne, after investigation, said he could discover nothing to bolster a theory that the sleeping husband and wife had been drugged.

"And I don't see how it would be possible to cut off a woman's hair without waking her," said the lieutenant.

"Maybe it was some woman who was jealous of my long hair," said Mrs. Hennegen.

Foresters Near Parsons Get Set To Check Fire Losses

Parsons, W. Va., Oct. 10 — Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Ware, 97, died at her home near Beverly yesterday. She had been ill the past year. She was the widow of Benjamin Ware, who died in 1914. She was born near Elkwater, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Louk. She is survived by four children, forty-three grandchildren, fifty-seven great-grandchildren, and four great-great-grandchildren.

Fire Precautions Taken

At this time of year there is quite a bit of activity beginning throughout the Monongahela National forest in this area. The woods are very dry, the leaves are falling fast, and streams are low, all of which has resulted in lookouts being placed in three forest observation towers to watch for fires. William Kramer is in the Canaan lookout tower, Louis Williams at Bickle's Knob, and Felix Wilfong at the Backbone Mountain tower.

Ranger R. L. Rowland, in charge of the local forest office, stated that William Combs, Parsons, had been made a state ranger. Otis Fansler, Heidricks, will be "smoke chaser", and a dispatcher has been put on duty at the forestry office here.

Included in the activities is a crew of men working under W. W. Myers, Parsons, building a retaining wall on Dry Fork, and another crew building a concrete mat at the Laurel Run bridge.

Mr. Rowland said that at this time of year there were many tourists wondering if they could travel through the forest. He wishes it to be known that travel is permitted at all times in the forest. He also added that there are no unusual restrictions on hunting in the national forest except on game preserves.

He said that hunting this fall and in future seasons will be improved and game will be more plentiful if caution is exercised in the use of fire and smoking, and if state laws and bag limits are observed.

A ten-acre fire was reported yesterday as burning over private land near Beechwood.

"If you build a fire, be sure it is dead out when you leave it", Ranger Rowland said. He wishes to remind folks that a campfire permit is required to build a fire in the Monongahela National forest.

In case persons who see fires which they cannot put out are asked to notify the district ranger here, the nearest lookout tower, or the nearest CCC camp.

Need Strong Army To Enforce Monroe Doctrine, Johnson Says

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP) — The nation should profit from the lessons of the Polish War, Assistant Secretary of War Louis A. Johnson said today, and "build up our army and our navy so that they may be strong enough to maintain and to give reality to" the Monroe Doctrine.

"We must stand ready to join in protecting the hemisphere should occasion arise," Johnson told members of the International Association of Casualty and Surety Underwriters and The National Association of Casualty and Surety Agents, meeting in joint convention.

"Polish territory was overrun in the first place because Polish M-day troops were not ready," Johnson asserted.

"We too have M-day troops and in an emergency they, too, would not be ready. They are our minutemen, our present regulars and national guardsmen, approximately 400,000 in number. If called out today, they would find themselves faced with shortages of combat cars, tanks, machine guns, gas masks, fire control instruments and other necessities."

Some military defects are being overcome, he said, but "industry is not yet educated to manufacture all of our needs."

"Besides, when the last Congress was in session, we spo'e of M-day troops to the number of 400,000 but in the light of present conditions, even the most conservative, estimate a need for 600,000."

He advocated intensive field maneuvers to give the nation's officers —"I doubt whether any army in the world has a more intelligent and better trained staff in the theory of warfare than we have"—practical experience.

Johnson, again turning to the defeat of Poland, said Germany's prewar estimate of her air capabilities "had proved itself no mere bluff."

The United States realized, after Munich, the importance of this arm of service, he went on, and Congress authorized a force of 5,500 planes by June, 1941. This seemed a "satisfactory number but history was made last month and we must keep abreast of developments."

German mechanization contributed largely to the swift conquest of Poland, the assistant secretary asserted, pointing out that while we have not "even one full strength mechanized brigade" Germany used 10 mechanized (Panzer) divisions in Poland alone.

He cautioned against putting too much faith in other factors—the rains on which Poland counted to bog down German mechanized troops did not come.

Far-cruising submarines and long-range bombers are rapidly breeching the barriers of the oceans, he declared, adding:

"No, we should depend on no one but ourselves. We should make ourselves so strong on land, on sea and in the air that potential enemies will stop, look and listen before trying to invade our territory or to violate our rights as a nation or as individuals."

Bank Night Winner Forgot To Buy Ticket; Won't Get the $400

Williamson, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP)—Circuit Judge Charles J. Ferguson sustained today a theatre's contention that "bank night" is "contrary to public policy, involving a game of chance" and held it did not have to pay Dewey Boaz $400 because the lottery is "unenforceable in a court of law."

Boaz sued the Cinderella Theatre for $400, claiming the manager withheld that amount after his name was drawn on the stage on "bank night."

The theatre said it did not pay off because Boaz had not purchased an admission ticket on the day of the drawing as required by the rules.

It demurred to the petition, asserting "the alleged contract upon which the plaintiff sues is void for lack of valid consideration and the alleged contract upon which action is based is illegal and void in its exception, is contrary to public policy, involving a game of chance, and therefore unenforceable in a court of law."

J. M. Jordan, Boaz' counsel, said he would seek to have the ruling certified to the Supreme Court, and if the Appellate Court upholds Ferguson's stand, seek an injunction against bank nights in this locality.

Lady Shorn of Locks By Very Bold Burglar

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 10 (AP)—Two luxurious braids of hair three feet long hung lugubriously from the wall instead of Mrs. Hennegen's head tonight.

Mrs. Hennegen blamed a burglar for the loss of the tresses, which never before had been cut.

Police received a call from much-perturbed W. F. Hennegen that he and his wife, Bessie May, awoke to find that $2 had been stolen from his trousers and his wife's knee-length braids had been shorn close to her head.

Outside the house, he reported to Detective Lieutenant E. F. Bourne, was found the cropped hair.

Bourne, after investigation, said he could discover nothing to bolster a theory that the sleeping husband and wife had been drugged.

"And I don't see how it would be possible to cut off a woman's hair without waking her," said the lieutenant.

"Maybe it was some woman who was jealous of my long hair," said Mrs. Hennegen.

He discussed a new "safety gasoline," which will not burn under normal conditions, as one of the new findings of the research men. Another product now in the process of study is a fuel which would ignite at 100 degrees Fahrenheit, 112 degrees cooler than the boiling point of water.

500 Attend Peace Rally At Fort Hill

Speaker Asks Roosevelt To Call For Armistice

One dissenting voice was raised last night as 500 residents of Cumberland and vicinity adopted a peace and neutrality program at a rally at Fort Hill high school.

The lone dissenter's identity remained unknown, and he failed to state his reasons for opposing the program outlined.

Highlight of the program, proposed by Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz and adopted by standing vote, was a resolution asking retention of the arms embargo with the addition of a cash-and-carry policy for all goods except munitions.

The other resolutions, which are to be transmitted to the President and Congress as expressions of Western Maryland sentiment, urged:

That the President and Congress keep the United States out of war.

That the United States adhere to a policy of strict neutrality.

That the United States government join other neutral nations in "continuous and unceasing efforts to achieve a speedy, just, and lasting peace."

The program adopted by the gathering had been urged in an address by Frederick J. Libby, of Washington, secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War.

Mr. Libby's address was featured by the suggestion that President Roosevelt propose a European armistice.

"If our government would call for a truce, not a government in Europe would dare to reject the plea," Mr. Libby said.

"Their peoples would not submit to such action."

He emphasized that the world's principal nations must sit around a conference table as equals and that the peace must be "on the level," must be in no sense a "dictated peace."

Wouldn't Satisfy

Nations he suggested as participants, besides the United States, were Germany, Great Britain, France, Italy, Russia, and Japan.

Mr. Libby pointed out that a peace so worked out would not, by any means, satisfy all parties.

"But it's better than war," he said quietly.

He went on to inquire why a peace made after a "war to the end" would be any better than a peace made now.

Quoting Hitler, he painted the horror that war will bring and flayed it as futile.

No Peace by Force

At the same time, he declared that a peace based on force, such as that which ended the last World War, would merely sow the seeds for another conflict.

Earlier in his address, Mr. Libby had urged that the United States remain out of the war in any event.

With regard to the neutrality act, he asserted that the best method is retention of the munitions embargo and adoption of a "cash-and-carry" policy on other articles, such as oil, cotton, and wheat.

Politics Obscures Issue

The peace-worker charged that "for political reasons, the real issue at stake in the Senate debate on the neutrality act has been obscured."

He explained that the question of how best the United States may stay out of war has been made to appear dependent on a choice between the arms embargo and the cash-and-carry plan.

This is far from the case, he continued, stating flatly that "we want both."

Must Prevent Boom

The arms embargo will prevent to a great extent any "war boom—which is an unhealthy prosperity, bought with blood money," he said.

The cash-and-carry proviso would keep our ships out of the war zone—and thus prevent any war fever if they were sunk, as they undoubtedly would be, he went on.

There is no reason why one of

1,800 Persons Visit Washington Shrine

A total of 1,800 persons visited Washington's headquarters in Riverside Park during the two months it was open under the sponsorship of the Junior Association of Commerce, President L. Leslie Helmer said last night.

Visitors were recorded from twenty-seven states and the District of Columbia, with the most interesting entry being that of a Mrs. M. Wigg, of Newcastle-on-Lyne, England.

BUILDING FOR PEACE— Dramatic pictures tell the story of the war, but here is a dramatic picture showing Cumberland men and American steel building America's future — on this side the Atlantic. Henderson Hopes Youth 'Does Better Than We'

A large audience of young men all of cannon-fodder age last night heard an address by Col. George Henderson about all the war graves he saw in Europe this summer.

Newsboys on the street were prominently displaying headlines stating "Daladier Shuts Door to Peace in Europe" when Chairman L. Leslie Helmer introduced Col. Henderson to his audience of Junior Association of Commerce members at the Central Y.M.C.A.

Shortly before the usual introduction, all members present had filled out a "neutrality questionnaire".

Crisis Avoided

It was natural, therefore, that Chairman Helmer should state that despite the fact Col. Henderson was going to speak on "His Trip Through Europe" that it was to be hoped he would have a thing or two to say about the current crisis and its possible far-reaching implications.

"Most of us are interested in politics and military affairs", Chairman Helmer said. "And Col. Henderson is well versed in both fields."

Col. Henderson, however, stuck pretty crose to his text, "A Trip Through Europe."

Saw Blackout

He delved into Scottish history somewhat, referring to an ancient massacre perpetrated by the Campbell clan, advised young travelers not to be afraid to eat such things as snails, stated that the English were more courteous drivers than the Americans and that the French were worse than the Americans, and gave a refreshing account of the guide who idolized Sir Walter Scott.

Col. Henderson also saw a "blackout" in London which was pretty much of a flop since traffic kept plugging along the same as usual. However, Col. Henderson stated that the British had doubtless become more adept at "blackouts" by this time.

Visits War Graves

Referring to the highly touted balloon squadron aimed to protect Piccadilly Circus against air raids by the Germans, Col. Henderson stated "How in thunder they are going to be of any help is beyond me."

In France, Col. Henderson revisited the scenes of the last World War's carnage where he saw thousands of old graves and a number of new barbed wire entanglements.

Upon hearing the German language spoken at Verdun, Col. Henderson commented that he "wasn't very pleased, because I'll admit I'm prejudiced."

Hopes Youth Will Do Better

Concluding, Col. Henderson stated that things were changing very rapidly and added, "I hope you younger folks will make a better job of it than we did."

Following the address, a member of the audience made inquiry regarding the "Communist situation in France" and was told that it was pretty well settled now.

When Col. Henderson was asked if the peasants and men-on-the-street wanted to fight, the speaker replied no, they didn't, but that they had been mobilized half a dozen times in one year and had about come to the opinion that they might as well get it over with once and for all.

Rotarians Take Flying Lesson

Pilot Speaker Says U. S. Airlines Best

Rotarians got a lot of inside information about flying yesterday at their weekly luncheon at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

The information was given by H. Kelcey Gault, an enthusiastic flier of Baltimore, who answered the question "Why fly an airplane?" and told how easy it really is to fly one.

Gault is an officer of the Thunder Birds Flying Club, a member of the Maryland Flying Club, and is connected with the air corps of the Maryland National Guard. He is also a past president of the Baltimore Civitan Club, before which he recently made an address on aviation.

Uses Model

Gault took the members of the club through the steps necessary for one to become a flier, explained the various functions of a plane, described its controls and the operation of its numerous instruments, using a small model of one to illustrate these points.

Four different forces are involved in the flying of a plane, it was explained, namely, propulsion, the drag of the plane, gavity, and lift.

Flying is much safer now, Gault said, noting that the percentage of accidents has now been brought down to the same rate of that in railway travel.

Speaker Flies Here With Wife

The American system of air transport has been perfected to the point where it is the greatest and safest in the world, Gault declared. The development here is far and away ahead of that in any other country, he said.

Gault flew to Cumberland for the meeting in his own plane, accompanied by his wife.

Birthday honors were paid to three members of the club whose birth anniversaries occur within the month, namely, H. U. F. Flurshutz, Frank E. Smith, and P. D. Cooper. They sat at a special table and cut a prettily decorated cake baked for them

Christmas Lighting Contest Announced

The Merchantile Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce met yesterday and discussed methods of decorating Cumberland for the Christmas holiday period.

Greene Street Looks Like Bomb Hit It

After a crew of men had worked all night Monday on a bursted water pipe at Washington and Greene streets, the pipe burst again yesterday morning at the same location.

The break in this main trunk pipe for the West Side completely shut off the water supply in the first block of Greene street.

When the pipe broke for the second time, the pressure kicked back due to air coming through the opening, water department workers said. This reduced the pressure.

The flaw had been repaired again by last night.

Ridgeley Nabs Another Driver

Cumberland Trucker Held for Jury

A Cumberland truck driver last night was ordered held under $500 bond for action of the Mineral county (W. Va.) grand jury on a charge of drunken driving.

The defendant, Thomas J. Tewell, of 317 Footer Place, was ordered held after a preliminary hearing before Justice-of-the-Peace C. A. Jewell in Ridgeley.

At the request of Ridgeley Police Chief C. V. Barncord, Tewell had been denied a jury trial in the lower court, and the case transferred to coming term of Circuit court in Keyser.

Earlier, Tewell's attorney, Estel C. Kelley had had the case transferred to Justice Jewell from Mayor Paul K. Morgan.

He was arrested Sunday night after leaving a Ridgeley beer tavern.

Barncord and others testified last night that Tewell staggered before and after his arrest and appeared to be under the influence of intoxicants. They insisted that he staggered on account of drinking despite Attorney Kelley's effort on cross-examination to bring an admission that it might have been because he is crippled.

Burns Fatal To Baby Girl

Dress Caught Fire At Kitchen Stove

A kitchen accident, it might have happened to the baby in any home, today had claimed the life of pretty little Sandra Spangler, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Spangler, of Ridgeley.

The child died yesterday afternoon in Allegany hospital after she had been terribly burned from her neck to her knees when her dress caught fire, supposedly at the gas range, at breakfast time Monday.

Efforts of her 7-year-old brother Bobby to douse the fire with water failed, and the child ran into the street toward her grandmother's home nearby, where her mother had gone to borrow a bucket for the Monday washing.

Surviving besides the child's parents and brother are her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Spangler. Her father is a plumber for the Town of Ridgeley.

Car Hits Child Crossing Street

A five-year-old girl was injured Monday afternoon in downtown Cumberland when she was struck by an automobile.

Nancy Jane McMillen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McMillan, 508 Bellevue heights, suffered cuts and bruises when she was struck by a car driven by J. C. Marley, a tobacco salesman, while crossing South Mechanic street.

Miss Virginia Alt, employed at the McMillen home, said she and the little girl were walking together when suddenly the child jerked loose from her and started to cross the street.

Marley reported the accident to police after taking the child to a physician. No charges were placed against him.

Man 'Defends' His Wife From Foul Language, But Gets Fined

A Rawlings man who allegedly beat up another man for using profane language in front of his wife was found guilty yesterday in Trial Magistrates court on a charge of assault.

William Darr was fined $5 and costs by Magistrate Frank A. Perdew for allegedly assaulting William C. Davis, also of Rawlings.

Darr pleaded not guilty to the charge, claiming that Davis had been using foul language in front of his wife.

The alleged assault occurred after Darr stopped Davis, who was passing his home, and commenced to take off his own sweater. It was then that Davis picked up a stone and threw it at Darr, Magistrate Perdew was told.

Darr then proceeded to knock Davis down and beat him up, it was asserted

Death Cancels Forum Lecture

Dr. Englebrecht Dies in New York

Dr. H. C. Englebrecht, who was booked to lecture here Feb. 22 in the series sponsored by the Community Forum, died at his home in New York Sunday Forum directors here were advised yesterday.

Immediate arrangements to engage another speaker of national note were made by the Forum committee, of which Clarence Lippel is chairman, and the selection will be anonunced shortly.

Dr. Engelbrecht was to speak before the local Forum on the subject "America Must Act." He was former associate editor of "World Tomorrow" and co-author of "Merchants of Death," a study of the international traffic in arms. He was forty-four years old.

His numerous writings were anti-war and anti-fascist.

A lecturer on a subject similar to that assigned Dr. Englebrecht will be added to the course, it is stated. The local Forum course includes six and probably seven lectures, the first of which will be given Oct. 25 by Dr. Glenn Frank, well known educator, editor, and chairman of the Republican party policy committee.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Reporters who went up to the Junior Association of Commerce dinner last night because an open forum on war problems was scheduled were disappointed. The potential cannon fodder was as silent as cannon on the Western Front have been up to now.

—o—

We started to make a "personal" out of this, but changed our minds. We got it over the phone that Dr. L. E. Daugherty is in Chicago attending a meeting of the Academy of Opthalmology and Otolaryngology, but when we got out the big dictionary to find out just what Dr. Daugherty was attending, we couldn't find any such words.

The nearest thing to them was "optology", the science of testing the eyes for lenses, and "otology," the science which treats of the ear and its diseases.

So if we didn't get the longer words spelled right, at least you may still know something of what it is all about.

—o—

We consulted the dictionary again when we wanted to say that a 97-year-old woman who died left 108 offspring. We wanted the word "offspring" to mean four children, forty-three grandchildren, fifty-seven great-grandchildren, and four great-great-grandchildren. We didn't want it to mean 108 children, but we were not certain. According to Webster, offspring means children, but can also mean descendants. Whatever you call them, 108 direct descendants of any living person are some big family.

The story of the death of the matriarch of whom we speak appears on the tri-state page of The News today.

—o—

This office has been the target lately for more propaganda than you could shake a French censor at, including a news release of the Communist party of Western Maryland and an answering challenge to the Communists printed in red ink by the local den (or whatever they call it) of the Ku Klux Klan.

The latest bit of propaganda, however, comes from The National Dunking Association, an organization "for the encouragement of good cheer and good fellowship" with headquarters at the Hotel Astor.

Alfred L. Plant, executive secretary of same, writes that we will shortly have a local branch of his organization in our town. He says many of our citizens have already signed up at New York World's Fair.

(Yes, Cumberland people, like all the other rubes, including us, probably signed up for a couple of hundred things at the fair. Every time you turn around you can sign something up there.)

The fat envelope from the Dunkers included the offer of a promotion scheme, which is for sale; an official dunker's badge; the association's official rules for dunking; and two pages on the history of doughnuts and dunkers.

Since this is still a democracy, if not a land of rugged individualism any more, we will have nothing to do with the official rules for dunking. That smacks of Fascism. Even the Germans can dunk as they please—if they have any coffee.

Rule Eight, however, is not so bad. It is: Repeat the above process until all the doughnuts on the table are simply fond memories.

There is also a poem:

"Dunk, yes dunk!
But please take care
To keep your fingers in the air
The doughnut only must get wet—
Or else it's not good etiquette!"

We now turn from poetry to what may or may not be the truth, but since Congressman Jennings Randolph got where he is today by saying only nice things about people, it apparently doesn't make much difference whether they are all true or not.

The association proudly quotes Congressman Randolph, one of the charter members, as saying:

"Naturally, I use the American method in dunking. I use all five fingers of my hand for a good grip, and a good grip on anything is the American method." Why, certainly!

Personally, we would be afraid to take a good grip on a modern doughnut. It might not stand the strain. We always handle doughnuts deftly, unless finger bowls are included and served along with the "sinkers and java".

Deaths

Mrs. Ida Crawford Pelton, wife of Albert Pelton, formerly of Cumberland, died Thursday at her home in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a son, John Squires; and three sisters, Mrs. Frank Powers and Mrs. George Swanwich, all of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. A. B. Brown, of Washington, D. C.

Army Too Busy To Study City's Flood Plans

War Developments Prevent Headway By Committee

Cumberland's flood control subcommittee has come into a stalemate.

The war situation is presumed to have caused delay in the preparation of plans and estimates in the office of Col. R. S. Thomas, district United States engineer of the federal War department, for a comprehensive flood control plan for the community coming within the scope of available funds.

"The press of other work," Col. Thomas advised the sub-committee, "has necessitated our deferring, for the time being, our completion of the report on the Cumberland project, so it is rather difficult for me to give you any definite estimate at this time as to when that report will be ready for further consultation with your committee."

The sub-committee met Monday night at the home of Chairman George G. Young, Washington street, to consider what steps could now be taken with regard to the flood control plans, but in view of Col. Thomas's letter it was deemed advisable to report the situation thus caused to the general flood control committee and to await further developments.

The sub-committee will so report to the general committee in the near future, unless in the meantime further word is received from Col. Thomas.

Eyerman Quizzed On Strikes Here

Congress Committee Investigating

Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman today had received a questionnaire submitted by a Congressional committee appointed to investigate the National Labor Relations Board.

The questionnaire asked for information on industrial disputes in Cumberland since the Labor Board became effective in 1934.

Similar questionnaires have been submitted to other police chiefs in industrial cities throughout the United States.

Commenting on the investigation now under way in Washington, Mayor Harry Irvine stated that it was probable that a few Cumberland people might be summoned to appear before the committee.

October Heat Records Fall

Hottest Yet, Says Weatherman

Cumberland's October heat wave continued yesterday as the mercury hit the 90 mark for the second consecutive day.

Monday's 91 has been equalled only five times in the last twenty-seven years during the month of October, according to government records.

Yesterday, the thermometer on top of City Hall hit the 90 mark at 3:30 p. m.

Previous high marks show 92 on Oct. 2, 1919; 91 on Oct. 5, 1922; 91 on Oct. 1, and 93 on Oct. 2, 1927; and 91 on Oct. 1, 1933.

Police Work Fast After Washington Calls for 'Pickup'

Just fifteen minutes after Washington authorities sent a "pick-up" here on Herbert G. Boumhoff, 45, the man was taken into custody by Detective G. Frank Gaffney.

Baumhoff, who is a stylish dresser and travels in a high priced car, was staying at the Fort Cumberland hotel. He was placed in the county jail on charges of passing several worthless checks in Washington. He is also accused of passing two "phoney" checks in Cumberland this month.

Police said Baumhoff represented himself as being in the advertising business. A rogue's gallery photo attached to the bulletin sent here check with Baumhoff, they said.

The bulletin showed that Baumhoff was arrested last year in Peoria, Ill. Additional information said he was known as a "bond jumper."

Boy Loses Finger Caught in Wringer

Robert, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Appel, of Little Orleans, had the little finger of his left hand amputated yesterday at Memorial hospital.

Hospital attaches said the boy caught his finger in a clothes wringer last week at his home. An infection developed and it was necessary to amputate, they said.

500 Attend Peace Rally At Fort Hill

Speaker Asks Roosevelt To Call For Armistice

One dissenting voice was raised last night as 500 residents of Cumberland and vicinity adopted a peace and neutrality program at a rally at Fort Hill high school.

The lone dissenter's identity remained unknown, and he failed to state his reasons for opposing the program outlined.

Highlight of the program, proposed by Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz and adopted by standing vote, was a resolution asking retention of the arms embargo with the addition of a cash-and-carry policy for all goods except munitions.

The other resolutions, which are to be transmitted to the President and Congress as expressions of Western Maryland sentiment, urged:

That the President and Congress keep the United States out of war.

That the United States adhere to a policy of strict neutrality.

That the United States government join other neutral nations in "continuous and unceasing efforts to achieve a speedy, just, and lasting peace."

The program adopted by the gathering had been urged in an address by Frederick J. Libby, of Washington, secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War.

Mr. Libby's address was featured by the suggestion that President Roosevelt propose a European armistice.

"If our government would call for a truce, not a government in Europe would dare to repect the plea," Mr. Libby said.

"Their peoples would not submit to such action."

He emphasized that the world's principal nations must sit around a conference table as equals and that the peace must be "on the level," must be in no sense a "dictated peace."

Wouldn't Satisfy

Nations he suggested as participants, besides the United States, were Germany, Great Britain, France, Italy, Russia, and Japan.

Mr. Libby pointed out that a peace so worked out would not, by any means, satisfy all parties.

"But it's better than war," he said quietly.

He went on to inquire why a peace made after a "war to the end" would be any better than a peace made now.

Quoting Hitler, he painted the horror that war will bring and flayed it as futile.

No Peace by Force

At the same time, he declared that a peace based on force, such as that which ended the last World War, would merely sow the seeds for another conflict.

Earlier in his address, Mr. Libby had urged that the United States remain out of the war in any event.

With regard to the neutrality act, he asserted that the best method is retention of the munitions embargo and adoption of a "cash-and-carry" policy on other articles, such as oil, cotton, and wheat.

Politics Obscures Issue

The peace-worker charged that "for political reasons, the real issue at stake in the Senate debate on the neutrality act has been obscured."

He explained that the question of how best the United States may stay out of war has been made to appear dependent on a choice between the arms embargo and the cash-and-carry plan.

This is far from the case, he continued, stating flatly that "we want both."

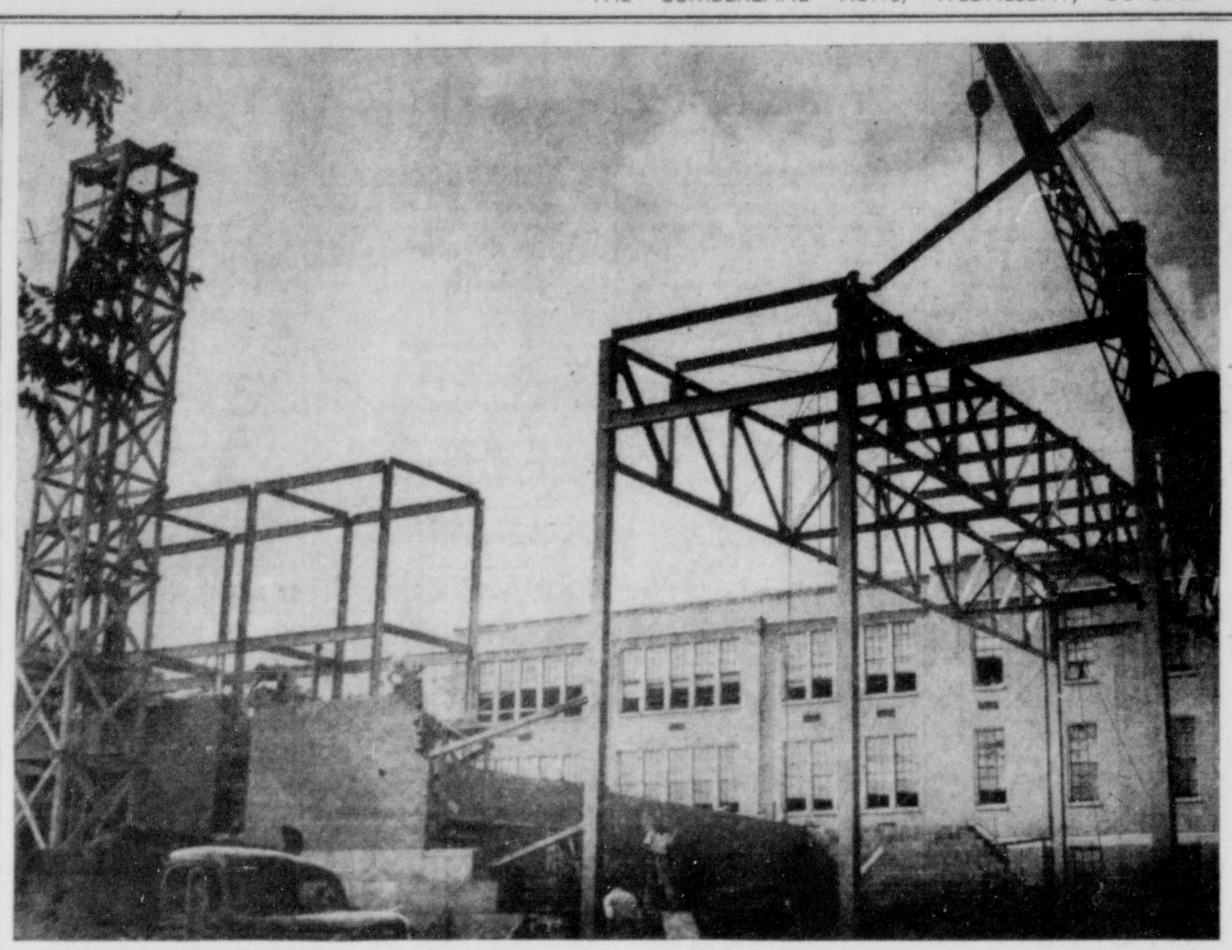

Must Prevent Boom

The arms embargo will prevent to a great extent any "war boom—which is an unhealthy prosperity, bought with blood money," he said.

The cash-and-carry proviso would keep our ships out of the war zone—and thus prevent any war fever if they were sunk, as they undoubtedly would be, he went on.

There is no reason why one of

Henderson Hopes Youth 'Does Better Than We'

A large audience of young men all of cannon-fodder age last night heard an address by Col. George Henderson about all the war graves he saw in Europe this summer.

Newsboys on the street were prominently displaying headlines stating "Daladier Shuts Door to Peace in Europe" when Chairman L. Leslie Helmer introduced Col. Henderson to his audience of Junior Association of Commerce members at the Central Y.M.C.A.

Shortly before the usual introduction, all members present had filled out a "neutrality questionnaire".

Crisis Avoided

It was natural, therefore, that Chairman Helmer should state that despite the fact Col. Henderson was going to speak on "His Trip Through Europe" that it was to be hoped he would have a thing or two to say about the current crisis and its possible far-reaching implications.

"Most of us are interested in politics and military affairs", Chairman Helmer said. "And Col. Henderson is well versed in both fields."

Col. Henderson, however, stuck pretty close to his text, "A Trip Through Europe."

Saw Blackout

He delved into Scottish history somewhat, referring to an ancient massacre perpetrated by the Campbell clan, advised young travelers not to be afraid to eat such things as snails, stated that the English were more courteous drivers than the Americans and that the French were worse than the Americans, and gave a refreshing account of the guide who idolized Sir Walter Scott.

A total of 1,800 persons visited Washington's headquarters in Riverside Park during the two months it was open under the sponsorship of the Junior Association of Commerce, President L. Leslie Helmer said last night.

Visitors were recorded from twenty-seven states and the District of Columbia, with the most interesting entry being that of a Mrs. M. Wigg, of Newcastle-on-Lyne, England.

Burns Fatal To Baby Girl

Dress Caught Fire At Kitchen Stove

A kitchen accident, it might have happened to the baby in any home, today had claimed the life of pretty little Sandra Spangler, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Spangler, of Ridgeley.

The child died yesterday afternoon in Allegany hospital after she had been terribly burned from her neck to her knees when her dress caught fire, supposedly at the gas range, at breakfast time Monday.

Efforts of her 7-year-old brother Bobby to douse the fire with water failed, and the child ran into the street toward her grandmother's home nearby, where her mother had gone to borrow a bucket for the Monday washing.

Surviving besides the child's parents and brother are her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Spangler. Her father is a plumber for the Town of Ridgeley.

Darr pleaded not guilty to the charge, claiming that Davis had been using foul language in front of his wife.

The alleged assault occurred after Darr stopped Davis, who was passing his home, and commenced to take off his own sweater. It was then that Davis picked up a stone and threw it at Darr, Magistrate Perdew was told.

Darr then proceeded to knock Davis down and beat him up, it was asserted

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Reporters who went up to the Junior Association of Commerce dinner last night because an open forum on war problems was scheduled were disappointed. The potential cannon fodder was as silent as cannon on the Western Front have been up to now.

—o—

We started to make a "personal" out of this, but changed our minds. We got it over the phone that Dr. L. E. Daugherty is in Chicago attending a meeting of the Academy of Opthalmology and Otolaryngology, but when we got out the big dictionary to find out just what Dr. Daugherty was attending, we couldn't find any such words.

The nearest thing to them was "optology", the science of testing the eyes for lenses, and "otology," the science which treats of the ear and its diseases.

So if we didn't get the longer words spelled right, at least you may still know something of what it is all about.

—o—

We consulted the dictionary again when we wanted to say that a 97-year-old woman who died left 108 offspring. We wanted the word "offspring" to mean four children, forty-three grandchildren, fifty-seven great-grandchildren, and four great-great-grandchildren. We didn't want it to mean 108 children, but we were not certain. According to Webster, offspring means children, but can also mean descendants. Whatever you call them, 108 direct descendants of any living person are some big family.

The story of the death of the matriarch of whom we speak appears on the tri-state page of The News today.

—o—

This office has been the target lately for more propaganda than you could shake a French censor at, including a news release of the Communist party of Western Maryland and an answering challenge to the Communists printed in red ink by the local den (or whatever they call it) of the Ku Klux Klan.

The latest bit of propaganda, however, comes from The National Dunking Association, an organization "for the encouragement of good cheer and good fellowship" with headquarters at the Hotel Astor.

Alfred L. Plant, executive secretary of same, writes that we will shortly have a local branch of his organization in our town. He says many of our citizens have already signed up at New York World's Fair.

(Yes, Cumberland people, like all the other rubes, including us, probably signed up for a couple of hundred things at the fair. Every time you turn around you can sign something up there.)

The fat envelope from the Dunkers included the offer of a promotion scheme, which is for sale; an official dunker's badge; the association's official rules for dunking; and two pages on the history of doughnuts and dunkers.

Since this is still a democracy, if not a land of rugged individualism any more, we will have nothing to do with the official rules for dunking. That smacks of Fascism. Even the Germans can dunk as they please—if they have any coffee.

Rule Eight, however, is not so bad. It is: Repeat the above process until all the doughnuts on the table are simply fond memories.

There is also a poem:

"Dunk, yes dunk!
But please take care
To keep your fingers in the air
The doughnut only must get wet—
Or else it's not good etiquette!"

We now turn from poetry to what may or may not be the truth, but since Congressman Jennings Randolph got where he is today by saying only nice things about people, it apparently doesn't make much difference whether they are all true or not.

The association proudly quotes Congressman Randolph, one of the charter members, as saying:

"Naturally, I use the American method in dunking. I use all five fingers of my hand for a good grip, and a good grip on anything is the American method." Why, certainly!

Personally, we would be afraid to take a good grip on a modern doughnut. It might not stand the strain. We always handle doughnuts deftly, unless finger bowls are included and served along with the "sinkers and java".

Army Too Busy To Study City's Flood Plans

War Developments Prevent Headway By Committee

Cumberland's flood control subcommittee has come into a stalemate.

The war situation is presumed to have caused delay in the preparation of plans and estimates in the office of Col. R. S. Thomas, district United States engineer of the federal War department, for a comprehensive flood control plan for the community coming within the scope of available funds.

"The press of other work," Col. Thomas advised the sub-committee, "has necessitated our deferring, for the time being, our completion of the report on the Cumberland project, so it is rather difficult for me to give you any definite estimate at this time as to when that report will be ready for further consultation with your committee."

The sub-committee met Monday night at the home of Chairman George G. Young, Washington street, to consider what steps could now be taken with regard to the flood control plans, but in view of Col. Thomas's letter it was deemed advisable to report the situation thus caused to the general flood control committee and to await further developments.

The sub-committee will so report to the general committee in the near future, unless in the meantime further word is received from Col. Thomas.

Eyerman Quizzed On Strikes Here

Congress Committee Investigating

Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman today had received a questionnaire submitted by a Congressional committee appointed to investigate the National Labor Relations Board.

Similar questionnaires have been submitted to other police chiefs in industrial cities throughout the United States.

Commenting on the investigation now under way in Washington, Mayor Harry Irvine stated that it was probable that a few Cumberland people might be summoned to appear before the committee.

Police Work Fast After Washington Calls for 'Pickup'

"Service deluxe" is the term to be used in describing police communications between Cumberland and Washington.

Just fifteen minutes after Washington authorities sent a "pick-up" here on Herbert G. Boumhoff, 4 the man was taken into custody by Detective G. Frank Gaffney.

Baumhoff, who is a stylish dresser and travels in a high priced car was staying at the Fort Cumberland hotel. He was placed in the county jail on charges of passing several worthless checks in Washington. He is also accused of passing two "phoney" checks in Cumberland this month.

Police said Baumhoff represented himself as being in the advertising business. A rogue's gallery photo attached to the bulletin sent here check with Baumhoff, they said.

The bulletin showed that Baumhoff was arrested last year in Peoria, Ill. Additional information said he was known as a "bad jumper."
